Japan Ready To Force Will On Shanghai Foreigners

May Invade Settlement to Find Foes; Warns Nations to Aid.

Plans Censorship, Customs Control

The Sino-Japanese War.

Japan completed her conquest of Shanghai and served notice on Britain, the United States and other democratic powers that she intends to enforce her will in the Anglo-American and other foreign areas of the conquered city. The Japanese threat to intervene in the International Settlement aroused a storm of protest from foreign officials.—See Page 3.

Japan Serves Notice.

Shanghai (Friday), Nov. 12.—Japan completed her conquest of Shanghai today in an appalling welter of blood and flames, and served notice on Britain, the United States and other democratic powers that she intends to enforce her will in the Anglo-American and other foreign areas of the conquered city.

A Chinese army spokesman admitted that all Chinese troops have been ordered to leave the Nantao area of the native city and that Chinese resistance in the immediate vicinity of Shanghai has ended.

Huge fires still burned around nearly one half the foreign areas of the city and there still was sporadic fighting as grim Japanese infantrymen mopped up Chinese stragglers.

Scores of foreigners were endangered in the Nantao area and a British newspaperman, Pembroke Stephens, 32, correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, was killed by Japanese machine gunners who fired on a group of foreigners watching the fighting.

Mastery of City Claimed.

More important than the Japanese victory to the United States and other powers represented here was the declaration by Japanese Commander Lieut. Gen. Iwane Matsui that Japan now is master of all Shanghai. The general told newspapermen, in effect, that Japan now expects the powers to recognize her victory and to grant her full cooperation in the suppression of the anti-Japanese movement among the Chinese.

His attitude raised a grave problem for Britain, France and the United States.

Scores of known anti-Japanese leaders still are in refuge in the foreign areas and the powers faced the possibility that the Japanese may invade their territory to seize these Chinese.

In addition there were the questions of what the powers could do in event the Japanese commander should carry out his veiled threats to censor mails and telegraphic communications, control the Chinese maritime customs—part of the receipts of which must pay interest on China's foreign loans—transport military suplies through the foreign areas of the city, and generally treat all Shanghai as under Japanese control.

The general belief was that the powers would adopt a more conciliatory attitude toward the Japanese.

Rejects Brussels Bid.

Tokyo (Friday), Nov. 12 (U.P.).—Japan today rejected the second invitation issued by the signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty conferring in Brussels on means of ending the Far Eastern war.

U. S. to Remain Silent on Shift In Brazil Rule

Loan of Old Destroyers to Nation Expected to Be Blocked.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Whatever the nature of Getulio Vargas' new regime in Brazil, the United States is maintaining a strict hands-off policy—and this even goes for comments on the situation by officials of this Government.

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles made this clear yesterday when he was requested at his press conference to discuss the American attitude toward the action of Brazil's President Vargas in suddenly promulgating a new constitution, which leaves him as the dictator of that nation, at least, temporarily.

Welles asserted that this Government was sincerely devoted to the principle of nonintervention in the domestic affairs of other Latin-American nations, as adopted at Buenos Aires, and that it proposed strictly to adhere to that policy—even to the extent of refraining from comment regarding internal political developments in those countries.

Evidence of Anxiety Lacking.

Whether this Government's concern over the activities of Vargas may become articulate, should it definitely be established that there is a link between his coup d'etat on Wednesday and the Fascist regimes in Germany and Italy, is problematical. But at the present time there is no available evidence that officials here are anxious over the Brazilian situation, except from the viewpoint of the impact it may have on international economic conditions.

At all events, this Government's role for the present will be that of a neutral observer of Brazilian events. The extent to which the swift change in the nature of Brazil's government will affect the relations of that country with the United States cannot be measured at this time.

Warship Loan Out of Question.

But one thing seemed certain—the proposal to lend Brazil six of this country's decommissioned naval destroyers—a project initiated last spring—is now definitely out of the question. Capitol Hill protested against that action when it was sponsored by the State Department in the summer, and that was before Vargas took an affirmative step to make himself a dictator.

Now that he has accomplished that

3 of Algic's Crew Who 'Missed' Ship Seized for Mutiny

New York, Nov. 11.—Three American seamen accused of taking part in a strike aboard the Government-owned freighter Algic at Montevideo on September 10 were charged with mutiny today when they returned from South America.

Assistant United States Attorney Vincent Quinn and four deputy marshals went down the harbor in a Coast Guard cutter to board the freighter West Selene, in which the three men were brought back from Brazil, and took them in custody.

Doctors Launch 'Finish Fight' To Close HOLC Health Co-op

District Medical Society President Directed to Engage Two Lawyers; Association Denounced by Dr. Woodward as 'Intolerable and Illegal.'

A fight to the finish against Group Health Association, Inc., new Washington agency serving employes of the Home Owners Loan Corporation and their families, was voted last night by the District Medical Society.

Meeting in executive session with a near-record turnout, the society directed its president, Dr. Thomas E. Neill, to engage two attorneys to work with its permanent counsel in waging legal war upon the association.

Action by the society followed an address by Dr. William C. Woodward, director of the powerful Bureau of Legal Medicine and Legislation of the American Medical Association, in which he denounced the HOLC-sponsored medical unit as "intolerable and illegal."

A. M. A. Backs Society.

Dr. Woodward, a native of the Capital and one time District coroner and professor at Georgetown and George Washingon universities, assured the approximately 400 doctors present that the A. M. A. is solidly behind the local society in its efforts to end operations of Group Health Association, Inc.

Drs. C. B. Conklin and Wallace M. Yater, who will represent the Washington society at a national conference of medical secretaries and editors to be held in Chicago next week in connection with a meeting of A. M. A. trustees, were assured they will have full opportunity to lay the situation before the trustees.

Dr. F. X. McGovern, one of the society's representatives sent to A. M. A. headquarters in Chicago last week to seek advice on possible prosecution of the HOLC 'health group, reported that the officials whom he consulted were in accord with the society's plans to demand action of the corporation counsel's and United States attorney's offices.

Congress to Get Facts.

It was the sentiment of the meeting that the fight should be pursued not only through court channels and the A. M. A., but also by acquainting members of Congress with the facts. Dr. Woodward advised that the latter mode of attack be carefully planned, that spokesmen be certain of their ground.

Dr. Woodward, who is one of the country's foremost authorities on medical jurisprudence, argued

Storm Warnings Ordered Up on Carolina's Coast

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 11 (U.P.).—The Weather Bureau hurricane warning system station tonight issued the following advisory: "Northeast storm warnings ordered north of Wilmington to Beaufort, N. C. Moderate disturbance centered over northwest Florida in conjunction with high pressure over North Atlantic States will cause strong northeast winds at exposed places on the Carolina coast north of Charleston, S. C., possibly reaching gale force near Cape Hatteras."

Rising temperatures, clouds and rain in the afternoon or evening were on the weather menu for the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia, the forecaster said last night. Maximum readings will be in the middle 50s, officials predicted.

2 Soviet Envoys Reported Seized In Fresh 'Purge'

By the Associated Press.

Moscow (Friday), Nov 12.—Diplomatic sources today reported the Soviet ambassadors to Germany, Turkey and Poland had been recalled.

They asserted also that Rudolf Somner, German consul general in Leningrad, had been recalled to Berlin at the request of the Soviet government.

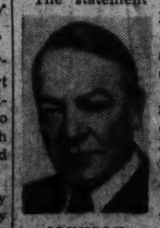
[Constantine Yurenev, Ambassador to Germany, and Leon Karsky, Ambassador to Turkey, were reported under arrest, supposedly in connection with Dictator Joseph V. Stalin's "purge" that has taken more than 1,200 lives in the last 15 months, according to the United Press].

Board, Scored by Gen. Johnson, Retorts His Kin Is on Pay Roll

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson opened an attack on Bituminous Coal Commission patronage in a newspaper column published Thursday.

"No man is in a better position to know about Coal Commission patronage headaches," the commission retorted in a statement replying to the criticism.

The statement quoted Commissioner C. E. Smith as saying that Mead Johnson, brother of Gen. Johnson, "was appointed special agent at a salary of $3,800 a year, on September 1, 1937."



JOHNSON.

SMITH.

He added that Frederick A. Reiman, a receptionist in the general's office when he was head of the NRA, was appointed special investigator, salary, $3,200 per year, last August."

Smith also said that "with characteristic energy and persistence, Gen. Johnson personally pressed for both of these appointments."

He concluded that "at the very moment the paper carrying the general's outburst was placed upon my desk the managerial committee (of the commission) was in session considering" the two appointments.

Green Takes NLRB Plaint To Roosevelt

Edison Co. Defies Board on Order to Sever A.F.L. Contracts.

By the Associated Press.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, carried to the White House yesterday the Federation's request for drastic reorganization of the Labor Relations Board.

After accusing the board of favoring John L. Lewis' rebel C. I. O. in labor's civil war, the federation's recent convention at Denver instructed Green to ask President Roosevelt for "prompt relief."

Green said Mr. Roosevelt assured him he would consider a list of cases which Green intends to assemble. All of these, Green said, would show that the board had favored the C. I. O. and hurt the A. F. of L.

In New York, meanwhile, the Consolidated Edison Co. said last night it will not comply with an order issued earlier in the day by the Labor Board to cancel its contracts with the A. F. of L. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers except under a court decision.

Floyd L. Carlisle, chairman of the board, in a statement asserted the company was not in the board's jurisdiction because it is not engaged in interstate commerce.

He said also the union contracts were not at issue in the hearings on which the board's order was based.

Contract Ordered Broken.

Green called on the President a few hours after the board had ordered the Edison Co. and six affiliated utility companies to break contracts with the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Although he said he had not discussed this case with the President, Green called the decision "outrageous." D. W. Tracy, president of the I. B. E. W., called it "another example of the board's bias" in favor of the C. I. O. The United Radio and Electrical Workers, a C. I. O. union, preferred the charges that resulted in the board's order.

Talk on Wages, Hours.

Green said he and Mr. Roosevelt also discussed wage and hour legislation without making any commitments. Green told the President there was a "strong sentiment" in the A. F. of L. against giving any board the power to fix minimum wages and maximum hours.

The federation, he added, tended to favor the proposed Berry plan for fixing a wage floor and an hours limit for all industry by law. Senator Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, suggested recently that the law should provide a $12 minimum wage for a 40-hour maximum work week.

"Espionage" Charged.

In the Consolidated Edison case, the board also ordered the seven companies to stop recognizing the A. F. of L. union as the sole bargaining agency for their employes, to notify employes they were free to join any union, to deal with any union entitled to recognition and to discontinue "espionage" into employes' activities.

The board found the A. F. of L. union was successor to the companies' employe representation plans abolished when the Supreme Court upheld the Wagner labor disputes act.

The decision quoted Floyd L. Carlisle, chairman of the board of trustees of Consolidated Edison, as telling an employe the company preferred the A. F. of L. to the C. I. O.

Northern Bishops Vote Union With South Methodists

Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 11 (AP).—The Board of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church announced tonight at the semiannual meeting here the acceptance of the proposed plan for unification with the Methodist Spiscopal Church South and the Methodist Protestant Church.

The vote of delegates for acceptance was: Minister for, 10,375; against, 1,227; laymen for, 6,844; against, 585.

Action of the Board of Bishops was described by Methodist clergymen here last night as "helping along" a unification movement which is virtually certain of accomplishment within the next two years. General conferences of the Methodist Protestant and the Methodist Episcopal churche: already have voted approval of the unification which will bring together under the title Methodist Church 9,000,000 communicants. All that remains to make the church combine a fact is approval by the General Conference of the Methodist Church South, which is to be held next May.

Farm Bill Not Ready, Congress May Act on Reorganization First

Leaders See Roosevelt; Agricultural Relief to Be Speeded.

Speaker, Barkley Voice Some Doubts

By Robert C. Albright.

Charged by the President with immediate passage of farm legislation and unprecedented action on five major bills in five weeks, returning Congressional leaders yesterday attempted to bring order out of a confused special session legislative outlook.

Determination to hold Congress to its agreement to act at once on the strife-torn farm bill was brought back from the White House by Speaker William B. Bankhead, as House leaders opened a round of pre-session conferences.

Across the Capitol, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley called reporters into the office of Senate Secretary Edwin A. Halsey "to tell you I don't know anything." Barkley will lunch at the White House today.

President Won't Appear.

Reiterating Administration budget-balancing aims and the familiar major bills in the President's agenda, Speaker Bankhead announced that the President will send a message containing his charge to the special session convening Monday and will not appear personally.

Faced with the task to "drive" for the completion agenda, both the Speaker and Barkley voiced doubts on the passage of antitrust legislation, and hinted trouble ahead on other measures. But Bankhead made clear no other major bill will be permitted to interfere with the Congressional pledge to speed the farm bill, now center of House and Senate committee controversy.

Outlook is that the House next week will throw two pending Government reorganization bills into the breach left by failure to complete the farm bill by next Monday's opening.

Economy aims, outlined by the President and Morgenthau, and restated yesterday by Bankhead and Barkley, meanwhile ran head-on into Congressional and municipal demands for new spending to offset business and employment recessions.

La Follette Urges Spending.

Running counter to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's proposed $700,000,000 cut in Federal expenditures, Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr., Wisconsin Progressive, called for additional spending to "stem the downward spiral," and urged new taxes to finance the cost. He asked added WPA outlays to provide a job for every employable man.

The new march on the Treasury may start today, when Mayor LaGuardia arrives here to seek $20,000,000 aid for New York's proposed new underground tunnel. The conference of mayors will meet in Washington Monday, with new pleas for Federal help.

Secretary of Interior Ickes declined comment yesterday on possible reopening of the public works program if unemployment grows. He favored reduced expenditures but opposed cuitting essential Government services.

Likelihood of new spending demands endangering budget bal-

House Body Seeks Way to Use 'Exempt' Securities for Taxing

Old Report of Carter Glass Found Suggesting Addition of Tax-Free Interest to Determine Rate of Levy on Regular Income.

A House Ways and Means sub-committee yesterday investigated the vast pool of tax-exempt Federal, State and municipal securities in a search for new revenues to replenish losses from business tax modifications.

An old 1919 report by Senator Carter Glass, while Secretary of the Treasury, was retrieved from the files in an effort to find a constitutional method of taxing interest on tax-exempt securities.

"The plan suggested," said Chairman Fred Vinson, "was to add to the taxable income the tax-exempt interest, and use the tax-exempt interest in arriving at the surtax rate. This rate would be applied to the income that is not tax-exempt."

Harrison Supports Changes.

Vinson said no decisions had been reached, and the plan was merely being studied in an attempt to find revenues to fill the $140,000,000 tax gap caused by proposed repeal of the capital stock and excess profits taxes.

New support meantime came to the House committee's move to modify the unpopular undivided profits tax, in a telegram from Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

Congratulating Morgenthau on his Wednesday night address forecasting a balanced budget, Senator Harrison wired that "there must be some modifications of the undistributed profits tax."

Wants Balanced Budget.

Harrison said the Administration "should fight to attain the major purposes outlined by you to restore confidence to business," and added:

'Ready for the Big Parade,' Armistice Day Suicide Writes

A middle-aged man who killed himself yesterday in the 600 block of F street northwest last night "belonged to the unknown", just as he said he wished to ina suicide note found beside his body.

The man, who registered as A. G. Erdanan, of Baltimore, drank poison. He left behind him a note which, he was careful to point out, would have provoked comment from psychoanalysts. He told them "Don't bother".

Writing that he had been unable to find "suitable" employment and that he had steeled himself for death with whiskey, the man asked police not to attempt to identify him.

"I am nobody from nowhere and belong to the unknown", he wrote. "Just pronounce me dead on Armistice Day. I am ready for the big parade."

Mother Faints as Maxwell Girl Loses Appeal for Third Trial

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent.

Drewry's Bluff, Va., Nov. 11.—Edith Maxwell, 23-year-old mountain school teacher, got ready to enter the penitentiary in Richmond today.

This morning, in her uncle's farmhouse near here, she was sitting before a small radio when a program of news flashes came over the air.

"The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals," said the announcer, "has refused to grant Edith Maxwell a new trial. The court affirmed Edith's conviction for the killing of her father, and she must now serve a sentence of 20 years in the pentitentiary."

Edith blanched as she heard the dread news. But she didn't cry. She got up and began to pack.

Her mother, Mrs. Anna Dotson Maxwell, fainted and remained prostrate for several hours. She was indicted with Edith back in 1935 after the mysterious death of her blacksmith husband, Trigg Maxwell, but she has never been tried. In Wise County Commonwealth's Attorney Fred B. Greear said late today she probably would be brought to trial next month.

The unanimous opinion of Virginia's highest tribunal, denying Miss Maxwell a third trial, was announced in Richmond by Justice E. W. Hudgins. It was said the court had reached the "definite conclusion that there is no reversible error in the record."

Charles Henry Smith, Alexandria attorney, had cited 17 assignments of error in appealing the case. In one of these he pointed out that Prosecutor Greear, in his closing argument, had quoted Edith as

U.S. Ownership Imminent, Rail Survey Asserts

Reorganization Alone Can Save Private Operators, Chicagoan Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 11.—After a five-year study of the place of railroads in American economic life, Dr. Lewis C. Sorrell, professor of transportation of the University of Chicago, believes "seven years of depression have left the carriers in such financial condition that the issue of private or Government ownership remains an imminent one."

Dr. Sorrell, whose study was sponsored by the transportation conference of Chicago, and whose findings were published today in a volume entitled "Government Ownership of Railways for the United States," set forth the following thesis:

"Private ownership operation of the railroads is the desirable policy for the United States, whether viewed from the standpoint of the special interest groups or from that of the public interest."

"It will," he wrote, "be conducive to the retention of private capitalism in railroad transportation;

"If railway investors promptly recognize obsolete capital structures and effectuate early revision of them in order to re-establish carrier credit.

"If railway managements recognize obsolete operating policies and practices, particularly those that reflect a somewhat unyielding individualism and intense competition (among themselves); and with determination explore all co-operative ventures that offer hope of realizable economies and more effective adaptation of the industry to present-day conditions.

"If railway labor manifests willingness to re-examine its policies and vested rights, and to eliminate what is obsolete in them; and will realize the changed status of railroads with its resulting effects upon traffic, revenues, wage levels and opportunities for employment . . .

"If shippers, investors, managements and labor can settle their controversies without recourse to Government itself . . .

"If these groups, together with the Government officials responsible for administering the regulatory laws which embody determined public policy regarding transport, will endeavor to modernize the system of Government intervention in the field of transportation . . ."

Dr. Sorrell added:

"There is little reason to believe that Government ownership would improve service, or effect economies not attainable under private ownership, or secure better rates or achieve more progress."

If the railroads were nationalized, the professor said, labor "would probably lose the right to strike."

Bankers to Fight Branch Extension

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—The National Association of Supervisors of State Banks made preparations today to fight any attempt by Federal legislation to authorize branch banking across State lines.

William R. White, New York State superintendent of banks and president of the association, in appointing a committee to look after its legislative interests, said:

"Any attempt to revive in Congress the discredited McAdoo bills which would permit branch banking across State lines, or other legislation designed to destroy State banking systems, will be vigorously opposed by the committee."

Shoe Union Fights Hull's Trade Pacts

St. Louis, Nov. 11 (AP).—The United Shoe Workers of America adopted a resolution today opposing Secretary of State Hull's negotiations for reciprocal trade treaties, particularly with Czechoslovakia, which would lower the tariff on shoes.

A committee reported to the C. I. O. union's convention that imports of shoes made by Bata, of Czechoslovakia, totaled 1,000,000 pairs last year, an increase of 500 per cent over the preceding year.

Another resolution opposed establishment of industries in rural, "cheap labor" communities.

Fears Vindicated, Hamilton Asserts

Los Angeles, Nov. 11 (AP).—John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said today four G. O. P. predictions of 1936 have come true.

"First, there has been a sharp increase in the cost of living.

"Second, higher taxes add to the burdens of the people.

"Third, unemployment again is increasing—you may not have felt it so much out here, but it certainly has struck the East.

GEORGE A. CORBIN.

By Christine Sadler.

The Public Utilities Commission committed "no error" in its recent readjustment of bus and car fares in the District, in the opinion of George A. Corbin, president of the Manor Park Citizens Association.

Corbin considers the resolution adopted by the Federation of Citizens Associations asking a reopening of the rate case to be "for the most part frivolous, not founded upon facts, and containing insufficient grounds to justify the commission entering a costly rehearing."

"I think the commission should require some showing of the kind of evidence the federation's representative expects to offer before a rehearing is granted," he declared yesterday.

Charges "Gag Rule".

He staged a fight at the federation meeting to prevent the resolution being adopted, and charged that it passed only after "the gag rule" was put into force. Even so, the minority mustered 33 votes as against 48.

"The fare prescribed by the commission should not be viewed as exorbitant. For the welfare of all Capital Transit riders it should be given a fair trial," Corbin said.

"However, I personally am of the view that a fare base of three tokens for 25 cents would be advantageous to the company as well as to the public, and I would welcome action by the commission to that end."

Corbin attended the hearing on which the commission based its new rate decision and thinks the rate-making body did "not exceed its authority nor give undue weight to evidence introduced by Capital Transit experts in fixing a universal token fare of six for 50 cents, with free transfers applicable to all regular services of the company, on both buses and street cars within the District."

General Readjustment.

"The findings of the commission constitute a general readjustment of fares, resulting both in increases and reductions," he said.

His association "has consistently sought to protect riders from assessment of unreasonable fares and is constantly seeking improvements in services rendered by the company," he said.

"It should be remembered," he declared, "that on some lines we are now being furnished additional service by new, modern street cars, and it has been assured that new cars will be placed in service on all lines when finances of the company permit. It is well settled that increased service to patrons at the same rate of fare is tantamount to a reduction. What Manor Park desires most is increased transportation service and efficiency in that service."

Corbin's association also is especially interested in "adequate school facilities for our area." An appropriation of $350,000 for plans and first-year construction of a senior high school at Fifth and Sheridan streets has been secured and citizens now are looking forward to an educational and recreational development there comparable to the one at Roosevelt High School.

An addition to Whittier Elementary School, increased police force for the area, beautification of historic Fort Slocum Park are among other objectives of the group. Although professing no quarrel with the present District administration, the Manor Park body has regularly gone on record in favor of local suffrage. Corbin personally believes that along with the fight for votes should go plans for "adequate machinery to insure an intelligent electorate."

Corbin is attorney and examiner for the Interstate Commerce Commission, votes regularly in Massachusetts, and was elected secretary of the Manor Park group on his second visit here three years ago. His wife is an active P.-T. A. worker in the District.

On Monday—Frank E. James, president of Benning Citizens Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

'Guesswork' Hit In Valuation for Utilities Rates

By the Associated Press.

A Government spokesman argued yesterday before the Supreme Court that the present method of valuing utilities for rate-making purposes is "nothing more than dignified guesswork."

Echoing President Roosevelt's contentions, Oswald Ryan, general counsel for the Federal Power Commission, declared that a "prudent investment" basis should be substituted for the present one of original and reproduction cost.

He participated in arguments on a 1933 order by the California Railroad Commission directing the Pacific Electric & Gas Co. to reduce its gas rates by $1,744,681 a year.

There appeared to be a possibility that the court might send the litigation back to a three-judge Federal court in California to determine whether the rates ordered would result in "confiscation."

Adequate Hearing Denied.

Chief Justice Hughes suggested that the lower court had not passed on this question but instead had determined that the company had not been given an adequate hearing.

Warren Olney, jr., general counsel for the gas company, suggested that if the Supreme Court desired to pass on the confiscation question, it bring the evidence here instead of returning the litigation to California.

Ira H. Powell, attorney for the Railroad Commission, explained that the three-judge court had decided that the State regulatory body has not given sufficient consideration to the reproduction value of the gas company in fixing the rates.

He said the commission gave "dominant weight" to the "prudent investment" basis, but added that "this does not mean that the commission gives no weight to the cost of reproduction."

The three-judge court enjoined enforcement of the rate reduction and this decision was affirmed last term by the Supreme Court in a 4 to 4 opinion. However, the court later decided to reconsider the case.

Justice Sutherland Abstains.

Justice Sutherland, for reasons unexplained, abstained from participation in last term's proceedings and in today's.

Since the 4-to-4 decision, Justice Van Devanter has been succeeded by Justice Black. This led some observers to predict that the rate reduction might be sustained by a 5-to-3 vote if the court passed on the controversy again.

Ryan told the court that it should reverse its decisions for the past 39 years and uphold the "prudent investment" basis.

Asked by Justice McReynolds for a definition of this form, he said:

"By prudent investment is meant the amount reasonably and honestly invested in public utility properties used and useful in the public service."

Rate Investigation Ordered.

The Federal Power Commission yesterday announced it has ordered an investigation into rates charged by the Safe Harbor Water Power Corporation to its two controlling companies, the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co., of Baltimore, and the Pennsylvania Water & Power Co.

Offices of all three companies are in Baltimore.

The commission said the investigation seeks to determine whether the subsidiary's rates are "unjust, unreasonable or unduly discriminatory." Some of the power from the Safe Harbor firm's plant on the Susquehanna River about 18 miles north of the Pennsylvania-Maryland boundary, enters the District of Columbia at a substation of the Potomac Electric Power Co. at Takoma Park, Md.

FHA Eases Rules on Insurance Of Home Rental Projects by U.S.

Dividends Up to 8 Pct. to Be Permitted; Changes in Act, However, Will Still Be Sought by Congressional Action.

In an effort to simplify and facilitate financing of housing construction for rental purposes, in line with President Roosevelt's new drive to revive the building industry, the Federal Housing Administration yesterday promulgated new regulations for Government insurance of such operations.

These regulations contained a clarification and a liberalization of the existing law which permits the insurance of large and small housing projects undertaken by limited dividend corporations and public housing authorities. They do not meet the major objections which have been made to the present law and the changes in that act enumerated in The Washington Post yesterday will be sought from Congress.

Dividend Rule Broadened.

The most important change in the regulations is a provision under which the FHA administrator may permit an additional dividend to be paid by limited dividend corporations in excess of the 6 per cent previously prescribed. The additional dividend payment may not exceed 2 per cent, "payable out of surplus earnings of the corporation after provision for required reserves," after the principal of the insured mortgage is prepaid in an amount equal at least to required interest and principal payments for the first amortization year.

This provision opens the way for stockholders in limited dividend corporations to obtain dividends of 8 per cent under the conditions described, thus increasing the attractiveness of that form of investment. Such corporations, however, are subject to strict regulation by the FHA administrator.

Wider Appeal Expected.

Other changes in the regulations were of a technical type, designed to eliminate uncertainties. Stewart MacDonald, FHA administrator, said the "new regulations should make a wider and more diverse appeal to equity investors without sacrifice of the control features established for the protection of mortgagees."

Promulgation of the revised regulations marked the beginning of a drive by the FHA to stimulate construction of low cost housing for rental purposes under Federally insured mortgages, which also is the aim of the new committee, which Mr. Roosevelt has set up and which met with him at the White House Wednesday.

Meanwhile, plans were being formulated for getting the Administration's public housing program in action. Miles Frisbie, executive secretary of the American Federation of Housing Authorities, said ten municipal housing experts would meet November 22 with Nathan Straus, head of the United States Housing Administration to draw up tentative policies for the $500,000,000 slum clearance and low-cost dwelling program authorized by Congress last summer in the Wagner act.

Officials to Meet.

The conclusions reached by this group, and Straus and his aides, subsequently will be laid before a meeting of all municipal housing authorities. Those scheduled to attend the preliminary meeting are Langdon Post, of New York City; Ernest J. Bohn, of Cleveland; Coleman Woodbury, of Chicago; Josephine Gorman, of Detroit; George E. Evans, of Pittsburgh; Bleecker Marquette, of Cincinnati; Harry W. Alexander, of Louisville; Walter W. Alley, of Los Angeles; L. Kemper Williams, of New Orleans, and George Green, of Baltimore.

Spokesmen for the building material industry reacted favorably to the President's effort to stimulate housing construction by private enterprise, but William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, frowned on suggestions that building costs could be lowered if labor would agree to a lower hourly rate of wage in return for a guaranteed annual income. Green, leaving the White House, said he doubted the practicability and workability of such a scheme.

Douglas Whitlock, general counsel for the Structural Clay Products Institute, an organization of brick and tile manufacturers, lauded the President's move. He pointed out the new attitude of the Administration would be an important factor toward inspiring the housing conference of business groups called by the United States Chamber of Commerce for November 17.

Garner and Friend Of Boyhood in 1st Meeting in 25 Years

By the Associated Press.

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 11 (AP).—Two boyhood friends, one the Vice President of the United States and the other a Paraguayan rancher visiting here after a quarter-century absence, met again today in a touching reunion.

Vice President Garner, en route to Washington, stood on the steps of his private car and saw the slight figure of William X. Lewis approaching. He stepped down with an extended arm and chokingly said, "Bill, you old son of a gun! How are you?"

Arms were thrown about each other and for a moment the two were speechless. They went inside and sat down to trade tales of fights, of hunting and fishing, and of adventurous episodes in which the two had taken part when they were together at Uvalde.

For a full 15 minutes they chatted. "Let us alone," said Garner. "We have things to talk about."

SEC Is Told Three Broke Stock Rule

By the Associated Press.

A Securities Commission examiner reported yesterday he had found that Charles C. Wright, of Wright & Sexton, New York Stock Exchange firm, and two other persons had violated the antimanipulative provisions of the securities exchange act.

The examiner, Edward C. Johnson, asserted that Wright, Herbert King, Norman Stern and Arnold & Co. created a "false and misleading appearance" of active trading in the common stock of the Kinner Airplane and Motor Corporation, Ltd., a security registered on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange.

Commission officials said the firm of Arnold & Co. no longer is in business. The commission met today to hear oral arguments on Johnson's report.

Peace Is Theme As U. S. Honors Its War Dead

America turned back the pages of history yesterday to celebrate the Armistice and to honor the country's World War dead.

The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and the Arlington Amphitheater were the center of ceremonies. There President Roosevelt, surrounded by Cabinet members and representatives from patriotic organizations, laid a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The simple ceremony, carried out in the name of the Nation, came exactly 19 years after the order was given to "Cease firing," at 11 a. m., November 11, 1918.

Throughout all the services, including those held by the American Legion in Arlington Amphitheater and the two services held yesterday afternoon in Washington Cathedral, ran a strong plea for international peace.

Futility of War Realized.

"Each new anniversary but brings to us more vividly the realization of the futility of war," National Commander Daniel J. Doherty, American Legion head, said at Arlington Cemetery.

"We can pay no greater honor to our departed and to our disabled comrades than to bring to attainment the ideals for which they fought, suffered and died. It is our sacred obligation to carry on their fight to protect the peace and security of America."

"In Europe and Asia streets are strewn with dead and dying, fields are devastated, buildings destroyed, business paralyzed, and industry crushed while columns of hate and fury spread their poison."

Foresees New Strife.

"Who can say in the midst of such international chaos that we may never again be called upon to defend ourselves?"

And Bishop James E. Freeman, speaking at services at the National Cathedral, said: "We of this peace-loving land stand appalled as we witness the tragic failure of the lessons which the World War sought to enforce."

In addition to President Roosevelt, leaders of patriotic societies joined in laying wreaths on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb in Arlington. These included Thomas Mason, jr., District commander of the legion; Mrs. Dorothy D. Harper, president of the District auxiliary; Daniel J. Callahan, supreme treasurer of the Knights of Columbus; Dr. Ivy Pelzman, of the Jewish War Veterans; John M. Miller, Baltimore supreme commander of the Order of Alhambra, and members of the District Chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Washington High School Cadets.

An overflowing crowd listened to the speeches in the amphitheater. Members of the diplomatic corps were included in the audience which filled the flag-decked, open-air theater. The program included music by the Marine Band, and songs by Miss Lucy Monroe.

Finer Peace Structure.

"We shall build a finer structure to secure the peace of America," said District Commander Mason, introduced by Theodore Cogswell, national chairman of the American Legion Armistice Day Committee.

"Our gesture," said Mrs. Malcolm Douglas, national president of the auxiliary, "is one of sincerity and love. It is in no wise a discharge of the debt we owe the boy (the Unknown Soldier). He demands more. He implores that we fashion a world in which such a death as his shall be inhuman; a world whose history shall be shaped, not by screaming shells, but by man's intelligence and reason."

Others who took part in the legion-sponsored ceremony were the Rev. Frank J. Lawler, national chaplain, who delivered the invocation, and the Rev. Louis C. Vaeth, District chaplain, who gave the benediction.

Georgetown University students held their own Armistice Day ceremonies, honoring the memory of Dennis P. Dowd, jr., first American to enlist in the World War and a former Georgetown student. He hurried to Paris to enlist the first week of the war in 1914; two years later he died when his airplane fell in flames.

54 Students Lost Lives.

With the R. O. T. C. battalion assembled, Georgetown students stood quietly at attention yesterday morning as "Taps" sounded for their 54 war dead. Col. Jesse C. Drain, U. S. A., gave an address to the Unknown Soldier, and the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president, pronounced the benediction.

At Washington Cathedral services were held in the Bethlehem Chapel, where patriotic societies placed wreaths on the tomb of President Wilson. The widow of the war-time President was among those who brought floral tributes to the tomb.

Women Paid Tribute.

Later, in the cathedral itself, a memorial service was dedicated to "Nurses and Other Women Who Have Served Their Country in Time of War," sponsored by National Capital Chapter, No. 2, Disabled Veterans. Music was furnished by the Marine Band Orchestra and the Cathedral Choir.

Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, delivered the address at this service. "In paying tribute to the women in white," he said, "we acknowledge that theirs was a higher discipline of spirit than military discipline, and theirs a worthier mission. . . . Though the nurse knew the angel of death was ever at her elbow, it was her outward calmness and her courageous spirit which often gave her patients the will to live; to her be given a greater tribute."

Leaders Urge Active Crusade AgainstFascism

Editor Foresees Civil War in U. S. if Trend Continues Unchecked.

Active resistance to Fascist aggression, whether in Spain, China or the United States, was the keynote of speeches delivered last night at the Rialto Theater in an Armistice Day rally to promote the "mobilization for peace".

Maxwell S. Stewart, associate editor of The Nation; Leland Stowe, foreign correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune and winner of the Pulitzer Prize; and Dr. Ch'ao-Ting Chi, lecturer at the New School for Social Research, addressed the meeting, which was held under the joint auspices of the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy and the American League Against War and Fascism. Professor J. C. Waldron, of the University of Missouri School of Journalism, presided.

Foreseeing the possibility of a civil war in the United States similar to that in Spain if fascism continues unchecked, Stewart urged immediate pressure by the democratic powers to halt the Japanese invasion of China. The most effective method, he said, was a boycott of Japanese goods, "and this comes down to the problem of finding a substitute for silk stockings."

Stewart, who spoke on "Basic Causes of the Spreading World Conflict," maintained that events in both China and Spain were aspects of the menance of "internation fascism."

An eyewitness account of the civil war as it affects Madrid was given by Stowe, who recently returned from Spain. "Madrid is on a moral plateau above the rest of the world," he asserted. "No city during the World War showed the heroism of Madrid."

"For the first time in modern history, Spain has a people's army," Stowe observed. "The decisive battles in the war will probably be fought next spring, but the longer the war lasts, the greater are the chances of a loyalist victory."

Speaking on a platform decorated with the Chinese as well as American and Spanish Republican flags, Dr. Chi attacked Japan.

"If China gave in at the present time, we would have not peace, but chaos," he asserted. "The only basis for peace is the Nine-Power Treaty and is for Japan to get out of China."

1937 Nobel Prize For Writing Goes To French Author

Stockholm, Nov. 11 (AP).—Roger Martin du Gard, 56, French author of "Les Thibaults," a series of novels on family life in France, similar to John Galsworthy's "Forsyte Saga," today was awarded the 1937 Nobel Prize for literature.

Scientists in the United States, England and Switzerland were announced as winners of the prizes for physics and chemistry. Each prize is worth about $40,000.

The physics award was shared by Clinton J. Davisson, of New York, and Dr. George P. Thomson, of London, for their research in electronic interference.

Profs. Walter N. Haworth, of Birmingham, England, and Paul Karrer, of Zurich, Switzerland, divided the chemist's prize for their work on carbohydrates and vitamins.

Davisson, 56, is a member of the technical staff of the Bell Telephone laboratories in New York.

3,000 Homeless As Storm Lashes Philippine Isles

By the Associated Press.

Manila, Nov. 11.—A typhoon swept across five Philippine provinces and through Manila tonight, leaving an undetermined number of dead, injured and homeless. Property damage was extensive.

First meager, incomplete reports showed five known dead, 20 missing, and many injured. In Manila alone 3,000 persons were homeless, their houses blown away by the terrific wind or inundated by torrential rains.

Some lives were believed lost when giant waves dashed 14 heavy cargo lighters onto the rocks of Manila Bay.

Hughes Also Asked to Reconsider Membership in Press Society.

The Washington Newspaper Guild executive committee last night called upon President Roosevelt to reconsider his acceptance of honorary membership in the American Press Society. A similar resolution was addressed to Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, who this week also announced his affiliation with the APS.

The resolution directed to the President read as follows:

"Whereas, the American Press Society, organized by newspaper executives and interests hostile to the principles of the American Newspaper Guild, is regarded by the rank and file of working newspaper men and women as an employer-dominated organization, and

"Whereas the American Press Society has publicly announced that President Roosevelt has accepted honorary membership in that society, and

"Whereas the Washington Newspaper Guild considers it incredible that the President of the United States, who has shown a commendable interest in the betterment of the conditions of the worker, would, if properly informed by his secretariat of the true character of the American Press Society, have lent his name to such a subversive enterprise.

"Be it resolved that the Washington Newspaper Guild urge the President to reconsider his action, that the dignity of his office may not be abused to lend prestige to any movement hostile to the interests of legitimate trade unionism."

The resolution directed to the Chief Justice read in part:

"Whereas the American Press Society has publicly announced that Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes has accepted honorary membership therein, and

"Whereas the American Press Society has engaged in activities in conflict with the American Newspaper Guild and its principles, which might eventually be brought to issue before the Supreme Court

"Be it resolved that the Washington Newspaper Guild urge that the Chief Justice reconsider his acceptance of honorary membership in this organization."

Oliver Holden, chairman of the board of governors of the American Press Society, stated in his invitations to the honorary members that the society will concern itself "with elevation of standards of journalism and journalists."

President Roosevelt's acceptance of membership in the society places him on the opposite side of the fence to Mrs. Roosevelt in a newspaper organization fight. Mrs. Roosevelt, as a daily columnist, is a member of the American Newspaper Guild.

Pacifist Shout At King Breaks Armistice Hush

Briton's Outcry Against 'Hypocrisy' Goes Round World on Radio.

By the United Press.

London, Nov. 11.—Britain's tribute to her World War dead was broken today when a man lunged toward King George VI shouting, "Stop all this hypocrisy! You are deliberately preparing for war!"

The shout broke two minutes of silence at the Whitehall cenotaph and was heard round the world, for the ceremony was carried to all the far-flung empire by radio.

The thousands at the cenotaph turned from silent memories of 1,000,000 hero dead to rage at the discordant cry. Men broke the police cordon and closed in upon the intruder yelling "Kill him!" Police hustled the man in an ambulance to Cannon Row police station, thence to St. Stephen's Hospital in Fulham. He was identified as Stanley Storey, 43, who escaped from an asylum at Canehill on September 21, after seven months under observation.

The King attended the cenotaph service in the khaki uniform of a field marshal, standing slightly in front of his brothers, the Dukes of Gloucester and Kent. The tones of Big Ben, atop the Houses of Parliament at the end of Whitehall, had barely died away after 11 strokes and the people were hushed when Storey broke through the honor guard. Fair-haired and hatless, he shouted, stumbled, weaved and was within 10 feet of the monarch before he was tackled by a policeman.

In an instant a dozen police were upon him as he struggled on the pavement. He was unarmed and Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare announced later in the House of Commons that Storey told authorities he had "absolutely no intention of making an attack upon the King or anyone else."

King George was deeply upset by the occurrence and asked for full details as soon as he returned to Buckingham Palace.

Doctors Here War On Health Clinic

against the association along the same lines set forth in his article in the October 2 issue of the A. M. A. Journal, namely:

That the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, a Federal body, is sponsoring Group Health Association under a contract which neither is willing to make public.

That the association is practicing medicine in spite of the fact that a corporation cannot, legally, be licensed to practice.

That the check-off scheme followed by the HOLC affiliate as a means of collecting the monthly "insurance" fee is "contrary to public policy."

No Defense Raised.

Not a word of defense was raised last night for the incorporated health association, speakers on both floor and platform condemning it as an ill-advised project which will fail to win the patient's confidence, produce medical services of inferior grade and encourage, through its precedence, the establishment of similar "plans" here and throughout the country.

At the outset of his remarks, Dr. Woodward described Washington as a "guinea pig" in a controversy which already has assumed Nation-wide proportions and whose potentialities are limitless.

The assembled physicians and surgeons also adopted unanimously a resolution reaffirming the society's interest in and support of the Medical-Dental Service Bureau and recommending a study of the feasibility of moving that agency from its present location at Eighth and I streets northwest into a building adjoining headquarters of the Medical Society at 1718 M street northwest.

It was Dr. Yater, who is professor of medicine at Georgetown medical school, who introduced the resolution urging the profession to give greater support to the Eighth street service bureau. This office was established several years ago for the purpose of making competent medical attention available to persons of modest incomes and who feel that fee adjustments are justified in their cases.

W. Va. Dry Found After 10-Day Search; Tells of Kidnaping

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 11 (AP).—Dr. James I. Seder, missing 70-year-old former superintendent of the West Virginia Anti-Saloon League, was found alive late today about 25 miles from Huntington.

William Dixon, member of a group which brought Dr. Seder into Wayne, W. Va., said Dr. Seder told him he had been kidnaped. The retired Evangelical minister, who vanished from home ten days ago, was found in an isolated woodland cave. Both his eyes were blackened and he had been beaten on the head. His shirt was spattered with blood.

R. E. Vetterle, of New York, in charge of Federal Bureau of Investigation agents working on the case, declined comment on whether Dr. Seder had been kidnaped.

Japan's Threat To Foreigners Arouses Storm

U. S. Expected to Join in Vigorous Protests Over Shanghai Declaration.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), Nov. 12.—Japan's threat to exercise control measures in Shanghai's International Settlement and French concession, including possible communications censorship and seizure of the Chinese maritime customs, aroused a storm of protest from foreign officials today.

It was understood British, American and French officials had forwarded outlines of the Japanese position—as made public yesterday by the Japanese army commander, Lieut. Gen. Iwane Matsui—to their home governments, and were awaiting instructions.

The British were particularly incensed, believing Gen. Matsui's warnings were aimed primarily at them because of their sympathetic attitude toward China in the fighting here.

One report was that the British Ambassador in Tokyo had been instructed to ask the Japanese government if it supported Gen. Matsui's declarations.

The Japanese commander yesterday told foreign correspondents in effect that he is now master of Shanghai and feels free to take "any steps" dictated by military necessity from now on in the Settlement and concession as well as in Chinese territory surrounding them. The general said he preferred not to interfere with the rights of foreign countries, including those of Britain and the United States, but complained of a general lack of foreign co-operation with Japan.

He intimated that some foreign nations represented in the Shanghai area have shown a decidedly pro-Chinese attitude throughout the Chinese-Japanese conflict. The Japanese army will not hesitate to establish a censorship in the foreign areas, and to take control of the Chinese customs service, centered in the International Settlement, if he thinks it advisable, Gen. Matsui added.

U. S. Protest Expected.

The United States Government can be expected to join other powers in a vigorous protest of any move toward Japanese domination of Shanghai's International Settlement, it was said privately last night.

Although the State Department declined comment, officials were represented as no little perturbed over implied threats of Gen. Iwane Matsui, commander of Japanese forces at Shanghai.

Pastor Is Sorry, But Windsors Shun War Rites

Duke Spends Armistice Day in Hotel After Word He's 'Not Welcome.'

By the United Press.

Paris, Nov. 11.—The Duke of Windsor, who faced shellfire with British Tommies in the trenches, spent Armistice Day in the seclusion of his hotel suite because a Church of England pastor announced that he was "not welcome" at memorial services for his wartime buddies.

A year ago today, as King of the British Empire, Edward stood before the Cenotaph in London and led one-fourth of the world's people in reverent homage.

Today the pastor of St. George's English Church, the Rev. J. L. C. Dart, said he was "not particularly keen" about Edward's planned attendance at the British Legion memorial services because of the Duchess of Windsor's two divorces.

Chaplain Apologizes.

Later, however, the chaplain apologized, declaring, "The very last thing I wished to do was publicly to insult a man who couldn't defend himself. I wish to take this opportunity publicly to apologize."

He telephoned to the duke's equerry, Lieut. Dudley Forwood, an hour before the service, and declared that the duke would be received by him and the church congregation with "all the respect due the king's brother" if he would consent to attend.

The duke, however, remained in his hotel room, observing with his duchess the two minutes silence for 1,000,000 of his countrymen who died in the World War.

Stays Away From Parade.

He also canceled plans to attend the Armistice Day parade of the French army, declining an invitation from President Albert Lebrun to sit in the Presidential Tribune on the Champs Elysees because he feared some embarrassing incident might result.

The statement of Chaplain Dart—himself a British World War veteran—created a sensation, and, for the first time since Edward's abdication, virtually all sections of British opinion rallied to the duke's side.

Navy Officials Ask for Better Shore Facilities

Cite Serious Congestion at Coast Aircraft and Repair Bases.

Increased facilities for servicing ships and aircraft of the fleet must be provided at once if the efficiency of the Navy is not to be impaired, Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics and Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen, chief of the Bureau of Engineering, said yesterday in their annual reports to Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson.

Shore facilities to support operation of aircraft lagged behind the authorized treaty Navy expansion, Admiral Cook declared.

"Serious congestion continues at operating and repair bases," he reported, "and has reached the point where it may prove impracticable to operate all carrier aircraft on the West Coast with the fleet until additional facilities become available."

Admiral Bowen asserted that "the material condition of the fleet is still satisfactory," but added that maintenance of the Navy had been hampered by lack of funds. "It is due to thorough co-operation and intelligent supervision of repair facilities afloat that this scarcity of funds has not resulted in retrogression," he said.

"Repair facilities afloat are now operating at the limit of their capacity, and additional facilities or additional funds for navy yard work are in order."

Admiral Cook wrote that the activities of the Bureau of Aeronautics in the development, maintenance and procurement of aircraft and aeronautical material had proceeded "in a general satisfactory manner." He added, however, that the scope of operations of the aircraft scouting force has been limited seriously by lack of seaplane tenders.

"The situation," he pointed out, "is especially aggravated because of the advancement in patrol aircraft themselves, which now admit of considerably extended operations. The possibilities of present squadrons cannot be realized, nor even explored, until the deficiency of tenders is accommodated."

Admiral Cook recommended:

1. Increases and improvement in the facilities of shore stations to meet the increased number of aircraft.

2. The construction of new planes to replace present obsolete craft and to bring naval aviation up to the requirements of a treaty navy.

3. Provision of an adequate number of tenders for patrol planes.

4. Improvement of the performance of operating aircraft and the provision of a considered experimental program.

5. Increases in personnel.

6. The adoption of a definite policy "at an early date" in regard to lighter-than-air ships, and the development and use with the fleet of nonrigid craft or blimps under a gradual but explicit and continuing program.

Admiral Bowen stressed the need for substituting Diesel engines for gasoline machinery now used in power boats. Such work, he said, is of major importance in eliminating fire hazard, which always accompanies the use of gasoline motors, and added that all new ships going into commission are being equipped with Diesel engines.

He also favored provision of increased funds for replacement of tools in the navy yards, asserting that "the need for tools continues to grow rather than diminish."

The demand for well-trained engineering personnel has been exceedingly severe during the past year, and he urged that more officers be selected annually "for engineering duty only."

Sheridan's Black Horse Fades Into Roan, Causes Dye Dispute

Officials of the Smithsonian Institution were considering yesterday whether it wouldn't simplify matters if Rienzi, famous war horse of Gen. Philip Sheridan, were restored to his original midnight complexion.

The trouble is that the stuffed Rienzi, although the identical horse that carried the general on his famous ride from Winchester to turn the tide of battle, is now "a horse of another color"—a strawberry roan.

He was transferred in 1923 to the Arts and Industries Building of the Smithsonian, where thousands of schoolchildren, familiar with the poem, "Sheridan's Ride," have peered at him through his glass case. Last spring an elderly student of Civil War history complained, with a strong implication, the Smithsonian had been doing some stuffed horse trading.

This rumor was renewed when Rienzi was taken temporarily out of exhibition to be transferred to a new case.

Taxidermist authorities have assured Smithsonian officials it would be quite ethical and proper to give Rienzi a hairdressing that would make him the beautiful brunette he was in the 'sixties. The American Museum of Natural History, they said, often recolors skins of animals faded or deteriorated by time, lest students get wrong impressions.

But Theodore T. Belote, curator at the Smithsonian, thinks Rienzi had better be left alone. "If he were just a biological horse it might be all right to dye him," said Mr. Belote; "but since he's an historical horse we'd better not do anything." Capt. Charles Carey, U. S. A., retired, assistant curator of military history, who has Rienzi in his special charge, also is reported opposed to any hair dyes.

Just to make matters a little more complicated, the historical Rienzi has not only two colors but also two names. It seems that shortly before Rienzi died and was stuffed in 1876 somebody persuaded the general to call him "Winchester," in commemoration of the battle. That was the horse's official name while he remained at Governors Island.

Mrs. Howard Rites To Be Held Today

The funeral of Mrs. Eleanor Selden Washington Howard, who died on Sunday night, will be held at 10 o'clock a. m. today from Christ Episcopal Church, where her kinsman, George Washington, was a vestryman.

The services will be conducted by the Rev. Harry Lee Doll, rector of the church, assisted by the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Bishop of Virginia, and presiding Bishop-Elect of the Episcopal Church, also a nephew of the deceased. Pallbearers will be vestrymen of Christ Church.

Burial will take place in Charles Town, W. Va., in the cemetery of Zion Episcopal Church, with services conducted by Bishop Tucker and the rector of the church, the Rev. J. W. Gummere.

Pews will be assigned to members of organizations with which Mrs. Howard was identified, and they are requested to assemble in front of the church, to enter in a body.

Mrs. Howard was a charter member of Mount Vernon Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and the last survivor of the group that met at Mount Vernon in 1893 to form the chapter, among them the five Washington sisters, Mrs. Beverley Dandridge Tucker, Mrs. Nathanial Willis, Mrs. Louisa Chew, Mrs. Robert Hunter and Mrs. Eleanor Selden Washington Howard. She was also a charter member of the Cameron Club of Alexandria when it was organized in 1896.

Joseph McManus Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Joseph McManus, 43, World War veteran who died yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital, will be held at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow in Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery with military honors.

Born in Minden, Kans., McManus was educated in Kansas City, Mo., and for some years engaged in the real estate business there.

He enlisted in the Ninety-first Division in 1917 and saw 18 months of active service in the World War. Returning to Kansas, he was the first commander of the American Legion post, which he founded in Minden, Kans.

He was connected with a real estate firm in Fort Pierce, Fla., before coming to Washington.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret McManus; two daughters, Helen and Peggy McManus, both students at Western High School; three brothers, Patrick L. McManus, of Fort Pierce; Hugh A. McManus, of Dallas, Tex., and Frank McManus, of Kansas City, Mo.; and one sister, Kathryn McManus, of Fort Pierce.

Lewis, Back From Reich, Expects Bond Payment

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—Senator James Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, returned today from Germany, where he represented American holders of German state and municipal bonds, said he believed "some payment" would be made to bondholders which he hoped would be "satisfactory." He said about $100,000,000 is involved.

Lumberman Sees Ills In Labor, Business Bills

New Orleans, Nov. 11 (AP).—C. C. Sheppard, chairman of the governmental relations committee of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, said today present and pending legislation in Congress affecting labor and industry is detrimental to business initiative.

Addressing a joint meeting of his organization with the Southern Pine Association, he scored the distribution of earnings act, the pending split-train bill, the Wagner labor relations act, the proposed reorganization of the executive department and the Black-Connery wage and hour plan.

AttentionsIgnored, Man Kills Himself

Mount Clemens, Mich., Nov. 11 (U.P.).—A middle-aged colored man, whose attentions had been spurned by an attractive young white woman, Lillian M. Willig, encountered her in a garage today as she was about to drive her car out, fired a bullet into her head, then ran into the street and ended his own life.

Miss Willig, 26-year-old bookkeeper at the garage, was in critical condition at a hospital and probably will die, physicians said.

The assailant William Hathaway, 47, also an employe in the garage, was found dead with a bullet in his brain near the banks of the Clinton River, a short distance from the garage.

K. Foster Murray Ends Life With Gas

Kenton Foster Murray, 61, Washington newspaper correspondent, ended his life yesterday in the gas-filled kitchen of his home at 1840 Biltmore street northwest. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide shortly after the body was discovered.

His wife, Lillian Murray, found him slumped over the kitchen table when she returned to the apartment after shopping. The Rescue Squad made a futile effort to revive Murray, who was pronounced dead by an Emergency Hospital physician.

His father had been despondent over ill health for some time, a son, Francis E. Murray, told Dr. MacDonald.

Murray for many years was Washington correspondent of the Norfolk Pilot. He also had been correspondent of the Savannah Morning News, the Detroit Free Press and the Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier.

WOL Is on Air Again in Truce With Operators

New Deadline for Contract 10 a.m.; C.I.O. Supports Spontaneous Strike.

Under a temporary truce with the management, striking operators of Radio Station WOL went back to work yesterday afternoon, and the station, silent throughout the morning, resumed broadcasting at 2:15 p. m.

The truce will end this morning at 10 o'clock, however, and unless an agreement is entered into between officials and the operators, the station will again be mute.

At a conference, which broke up early today, the management of WOL offered the operators a scale of $30.50 minimum, with an increase weekly of $1.50 for each six months service until the maximum of $50 might be reached.

Deadlock Ends Parley.

The conference broke up in a deadlock, but it will be resumed at 10 o'clock, and both officials and a spokesman for the striking operators said they believed a compromise settlement would be reached.

A sit-down strike of the operators prevented WOL from going on the air yesterday morning, when the four technicians assigned to the Heurich Building headquarters refused to function. Three other operators took over the transmitting room in the Annapolis Hotel.

In the Heurich Building the strikers wandered in and out of the control room, and chatted genially with the idle announcers. There was an air of personal friendliness, despite the impasse, and both William B. Dolph, general manager of the station, and Gantt, spokesman for the operators and employes of the station, ridiculed rumors of possible violence.

Since September 7, C. I. O. organization activities have been under way at the station. Basis of the operators' complaints is the lack of a salary scale comparable with that recently won by the Columbia Broadcasting System operators in New York and Washington.

A written contract was presented to Dolph last Friday. Then, meeting with the men again Tuesday, Dolph refused the contract, which included a wage scale of $49.50 to $92, similar to Columbia's.

He asked the operators to consider the size of the station, and its relative earning power, and requested them to reconsider their demands.

When a new contract, designed to meet Dolph's objections was drawn up, he did not agree to consider it, according to Gantt, an employe of the station for nine years. The new contract called for a scale of $37.50 to $62.50 a week.

Thousands of Washington radio fans first discovered about the strike yesterday morning when they tuned in on WOL for the Musical Clock, and there was only silence.

Soon advertisers began telephoning the station.

Dolph told them no charge would be made for programs and announcements not broadcast. He refused to estimate the amount of money the strike had cost.

C. I. O. Denies Calling Strike.

WOL is the Washington outlet for the Mutual Broadcasting System. It is a link on the Southern "round robin," which feeds programs through from New York to Western points on the chain. Interruption to the Western circuit, however, was avoided by transferring these broadcasts.

The announcement was made last night by John Austin, District organizer of the American Communications Association, a C. I. O. affiliate, formerly known as the American Radio Telegraphers Association, that, although the WOL strike was not called by his group and was launched by the operators at their own initiative, his organization was behind them.

'Pat' Ryans' Condition Declared 'Not Critical'

Hickory, N. C., Nov. 11 (AP).—The condition of Basil A. (Pat) Ryan, who was admitted to a hospital here six days ago, a few hours after his surprise marriage to a 21-year-old Morganton girl, was described tonight as "not critical."

Dr. Dan N. Stewart, the attending physician, said the 28-year-old sportsman, a grandson of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan, New York financier, was "gradually improving." The nature of Ryan's illness was not disclosed.

Philippines May Go To Reich or Italy, Rep. Harlan Claims

Manila, Nov. 11 (AP).—Expressing fear that the Philippine with independence would face dangers from without, Representative Byron B. Harlan (Democrat), Ohio, predicted today the islands would not be granted independence earlier than 1946, as provided in the Tydings-McDuffie act.

He told newspapermen Japan was using the Philippines as a "pawn" in connection with the anti-Communist agreement of Italy, Germany and Japan.

"With Formosa and her new conquest in China Japan will not need the Philippines," Harlan said. "Maybe, sooner or later, the Philippines will go either to Germany or Italy."

D. C. Woman Freed Of Trust Violation

Mrs. Valerie McMahon, 43, 1107 Sixteenth street northwest, was cleared of a larceny after trust charge in Police Court yesterday when the case was nolle-prossed on motion of Carl Kindelberger, chief assistant district attorney.

The former charge grew out of a complaint by Mrs. Jennie Irvin, of the Park Lane Apartments, who alleged she had given Mrs. McMahon $125 several years ago which should have been used for the purchase of stationery for a social reform project. Mrs. Irvin stated there had never been an accounting for the money.

The district attorney's officers held a meeting yesterday and learned that the money had been used for the purchase of stationery, and hence cleared Mrs. McMahon of the charge.

Wallace Urges Farmer Unity On Legislation

Secretary Tells Grange Government Wants Minimum of Control.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 11—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace made a plea today for unity of all agriculture in the United States to the end that permanent farm legislation may be enacted, in addressing the seventy-first annual convention of the National Grange.

Since practically all farm people, the Secretary said, are agreed on the basic principles of proposed farm legislation, "surely there can be appropriate compromises" of any disputed phases of the program, which is to come before the special session of Congress convening next week.

Farmer Control Is Aim.

The Secretary told the grangers that control by farmers was desired by the Government in the new program. He declared emphatically that there was no governmental aim toward regimentation of the American farmer.

"There should be merely enough governmental supervision," he asserted, "to see that one group does not step on another or on the consumer."

Discussing parity of income, Secretary Wallace said agriculture did not get a fair share of the national income this last year.

"It was short by a billion dollars," he said, "even though the farmer had his best year since 1930."

There was a round of applause when the secretary declared that the farmer is entitled to the same share in tariff benefits as industry and business.

Praises Trade Policy.

The drought and increased prosperity were credited by the secretary for increased imports of agricultural commodities. He said he did not believe the American market could be guarantee to the American farmer. If there be no imports, he said, there can be no exports, and this "would be just the same as holding a gun at the head of the farmer."

He praised Secretary Hull for able negotiation of reciprocal trade treaties, and added that "tariffs on manufactured goods were lowered more than agricultural products."

Opposition to the expressed desire of Louis J. Taber, of Columbus, Ohio, to resign as master of the National Grange, gained momentum today among the delegates here.

Taber, who desired to return to private life after 14 years as national master—longer than anyone else ever held the post—and 37 years as a charter officer of the grange, was undecided as to his final action.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Ill., Nov. 11.—Charles Talbert, guard in the Department of the Interior Building at Washington, was found guilty of manslaughter yesterday on charges growing out of an auto crash which killed three persons September 4.

Talbert was sentenced to six months in jail and payment of a $50 fine, after the jury deliberated the case for two hours.

Gambling Slips, Machine Shown In Trial of 7

Defendants Charged With Taking Bet From Policeman.

Paraphernalia seized by police when they raided an alleged gaming establishment at 1230 Fourteenth street northwest last March was introduced in evidence in District Court yesterday in the trial of seven men who are charged with setting up a gaming table at the place.

Slips of paper, on which there were race horse names, "run-down sheets," a radio, a black-jack machine, and a telephone with a complicated hookup were exhibited by Samuel F. Beach, assistant United States attorney, prosecuting the case. The Government closed its case last night.

Harry T. Whelan, attorney for the seven men, said he had not determined whether he would offer testimony or content himself with what he called the "insufficiency" of the prosecution testimony. Previously, he attempted to have the case thrown out of court on grounds the raid was based on an invalid search warrant and the defendants had not been sufficiently connected with operation of the place.

Those on trial are Carroll P. (Nubby) Nuckols, George W. Godfrey, Anthony T. Costello, Mo[illegible] Morganstein, Harry C. Adams, [illegible]bert S. Murray and Lawrence F. [illegible]ani. The seven are charged with having taken a $2 bet from a policeman last February.

Children's Aid Invoked In Census of Workless

Unemployment Census Administrator John D. Biggers yesterday announced that Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker has asked all State superintendents of education to explain the census to their pupils November 16, the day it is taken.

"This would have the double effect of informing the children on [illegible] interesting and important public undertaking, and of enabling children of illiterate or foreign-born unemployed parents to assist [illegible] filling out the cards, Dr. Studebaker said.

Vargas Denies Fascism Is Aim Of Brazil Coup

New Dictatorial Powers Are Called Democracy 'Moulded to Needs.'

Rio De Janeiro, Nov. 11.—The Government of President Getulio Vargas assured foreign diplomats today that its assumption of dictatorial powers was not fascism but democracy "moulded to Brazilian necessities."

Diplomats of many countries made inquiries concerning the reported Fascist implications of Vargas' coup yesterday, in which he dissolved Congress and promulgated a new constitution.

It was learned on good authority that the Italian and German envoys had made overtures to gain Brazil's adherence to the Italian-German-Japanese Anti-Communism pact but had been turned down.

Tranquility apparently extended through the nation, with Vargas firmly in control. Censorship continued, however, under the "State Emergency" set up under the new constitution, which replaced the often-suspended "liberal" 1934 constitution.

Vargas meanwhile, was understood to be working on two important decrees.

The first, declaring a moratorium on foreign debt payments, was indicated in his radio broadcast last night explaining to the nation the reasons for the coup.

The second was a decree cutting the export tax on coffee and giving substance to the policy announced November 3 of abandoning export price control over Brazil's principal product. At that time Vargas scrapped the seven-year-old system of controlling coffee surpluses by government purchase and destruction.

In his speech last night Vargas said his bloodless coup had been made necessary by the threat of armed revolt from "regional mobsters masked as party leaders."

Nazi Hopes High.

Berlin, Nov. 11 (AP).—As a result of President Getulio Vargas' assumption of full powers in Brazil, hope ran high in Nazi circle today that Brazil might join soon the German-Japanese-Italian pact against communism.

Brazil is the most important Germanic outpost in South America. There are 800,000 Germans in Brazil, not including Brazilians of German origin. Germans in Brazil are regarded as particularly loyal to the fatherland. They live in segregated German settlements, and, therefore, are more easily reached by Nazi organizers than most Germans living abroad.

Pants for Profit Will Be Made by Federal Project

Mount Pleasant, Pa., Nov. 11 (AP). Westmoreland Homesteads, one of the Government's experiments in rural resettlement, will make an experiment of its own in pants-making on a profit-sharing basis.

Assistant Community Manager Paul M. Campbell said today that "we are definitely going to get the factory, and construction will go forward as rapidly as possible. A Farm Security Administration loan of $240,000 will finance the plant.

The community has a population of more than 200 families. The 170 women homesteaders and 52 men employes will receive an hourly wage in addition to a percentage of the plant's profits.

More Vote Frauds Unearthed in N. Y.

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—Discovery of additional fraudulent ballots today marked the eighth day of the complicated count of the proportional representation vote for New York's city council.

More than 20 per cent of the ballots in one Bronx district showed evidence of tampering. Rectified, the count cut 24 votes from a Democratic candidate and 82 from a Republican, and added 14 to a Communist and 51 to two Labor Party candidates. The ballot box, one of 25 impounded in the Bronx, was turned over to handwriting experts.

In Manhattan, the first hint of fraud was given when Special Deputy Assistant Attorney General Morris Ernst ordered three batches of ballots sealed for handwriting examination.

Congress Chiefs Pledge 'Drive' For 5 'Must' Bills in 5 Weeks

Bankhead and Barkley Hint Trouble Ahead on Some Measures, But Nothing Will Be Allowed to Interfere With Speeding Farm Aid.

ancing hopes, was only one of the troublous session prospects confronting leaders on their return here yesterday. Besides the farm bill and farm taxes (undrafted), the wages-and-hours bill still was deadlocked, and other measures on the President's list were in various stages of readiness.

Their status was:

Reorganization bill, on the Senate calendar in omibus form, and the last two sections of the split House bill ready for House action.

Farm (ever normal granary), awaiting House and Senate drafting and final action, with processing taxes and compulsory control features center of a raging House controversy. Will be delayed at least a week.

Wages and hours, held up in the Rules Committee, and facing possible Labor Committee move to bring it back for rewriting. Petition to discharge Rules Committee, and move bill to House floor, will be introduced next week.

Regional planning agencies, not yet reported by either House or Senate committees.

Antitrust law revision, not drafted, and probably scheduled for "study" only this session.

Rift Is Foreshadowed.

Foreshadowing possible policy differences among leaders, a telegram from Senator Pat Harrison, (Democrat), Mississippi, congratulating Secretary Morgenthau on budget balancing aims, and urging moderation of the undivided profits tax, carried the significant last sentence:

"The Administration must apreciate that honest differences of opinion may arise as to policies, but that it cannot permit these differences to influence insinuations and charges of party disloyalty."

Congressional leadership conferences began immediately on the return to Washington yesterday of Speaker Bankhead and Senator Barkley. Following his luncheon at the White House, the Speaker called on House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn to take stock of the legislative situation. Barkley, who will call at the White House today, said there will be conferences between House and Senate leaders later this week.

Appraised of Congressional moves for new spending, Speaker Bankhead told reporters that "if we authorize a lot of new appropriations we are going to have to impose taxes to pay for them."

Bankhead said he was for budget balancing, "and that means holding down expenditures to match receipts."

He declared for "compulsory" as against "voluntary" crop control, and declared:

"If we are going to provide a farm program, then we have got to find the money to pay for it—either processing taxes or something else."

Committee Is Split.

The House Agricultural Committee is sharply split on compulsory features of the farm program. It is likewise divided on use of processing taxes to finance the program, which Agriculture Department officials told the group yesterday will cost about $275,000,000, in addition to the $500,000,000 soil conservation program.

Bankhead was questioned on the outlook for all of the measures on the President's full legislative agenda.

"I hope we can get final action on them, whether they are enacted or not," he said.

He declared the wages and hours bill "will be passed in some form, if it can be gotten up." Anti-trust law revision, fifth item on the agenda, was not mentioned at the White House luncheon, he added.

Senator Barkley likewise was asked if all five measures could be passed.

"I won't say they can't be," he replied. Barkley said the session "presumably" will limit activities to the five items named, but it was his personal opinion that one, anti-trust law revision, would merely be studied in the short session.

"Whether you can enact five important measures like that in five weeks assumes unprecedented speed," the Senate leader continued. "No time we spend in thinking is ever wasted, but we won't be able to waste much time in talking. We will drive to get everything through, but one man's guess is as good as another's.

Morgenthau Praised.

Salt Lake City, Nov. 11 (AP).—Orval W. Adams, of Salt Lake City, president of the American Bankers Association, said in a statement today:

"Secretary Morgenthau's pledge to balance the budget through cutting expenditures will receive the unqualified indorsement and grateful appreciation of every good American citizen.

"His proposal to broaden the base of the income tax structure, so more persons will pay such levies, and his suggestion that some consumer taxes be abolished, are sound and constructive."

Spanish Rebels Report 'Mowing Down' Enemy

Insurgents Claim Repulse of Loyalists on Aragon Front.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Nov. 11.—Spanish insurgent communiques reported tonight Generalissimo Francisco Franco's troops had thrown back attacks by government forces on the northern Aragon front, "crushing whole regiments" in furious action.

The reports said government troops, preceded by an artillery barrage of several hours, launched their attack on military positions known as Hill 1100, Hill 1062 and Coseta del Batanero, in the Ornasabinanigo sector. It soon became a general offensive.

"Our brave troops beat them back to their starting point," said an insurgent communique. "Our machine guns mowed them down like flies."

Contradicting the insurgent reports, government sources asserted that Catalan militiamen had broken through the insurgent line in northern Aragon in guerrilla warfare. The Catalans, fighting for the government, were reported to have captured two positions near Sabinanigo.

Insurgent officials at Salamanca declared Franco's government soon would be recognized by Japan and Portugal. They said Poland is "disposed" to name consular agents in the insurgent zone.

Perpignan, France, Nov. 11 (AP). Luis Companys, president of Catalonia, today crossed the French frontier and boarded a train for Paris, accompanied by his wife and daughter. He said he was en route to Belgium. The Catalan capital, Barcelona, now is the "temporary capital" of the Spanish government.

Nations to Exchange Agents.

London, Nov. 11 (AP).—The foreign office tonight announced Britain and insurgent Spain had reached an agreement for the exchange of "commercial agents." The announcement reiterated that the exchange would not constitute recognition of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's government. The foreign office said the British agent would be stationed at Salamanca and that Franco's agent would come to London. In addition, sub-agents will be appointed at a "limited number of other places."

Hagerstown, Nov. 11.—Work will start Monday on the new three-span bridge across Licking Creek on the National highway 17 miles west of here.

Safety Experts Witness Use of Traffic Radio

By Howard F. Wentworth.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 11.—Newspaper delegates to the Commercial Investment Trust Seminar of Safety were given opportunity to inspect New York, New Jersey and Connecticut methods of dealing with modern traffic congestion today during a 126-mile tour of intricate elevated and high-speed highway systems.

Leaving the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in two buses, the 50 reporters, editors and special writers from all sections of the country were driven across the recently completed Triborough Bridge, while radio technicians established two-way short-wave connections between the moving vehicles.

So successful was the radio experiment that several of the Nation's outstanding traffic authorities on the trip envisioned use of this type of communication to control and facilitate street and highway use.

Officials of radio station WOR said it was the first time in short-wave history that two moving buses had been connected with receiving and broadcasting equipment.

Sees Use of Device.

"Obviously," said John W. Darr, director of the C. I. T. Safety Foundation, "radio communication offers an advanced method of dealing with traffic plans. With millions of cars now equipped with radios, it is not idle to dream traffic authorities will warn motorists of sudden traffic jams, traffic hazards and direct them over alternate routes."

With Darr and Dr. Miller McClintock, director of the Harvard University bureau for street and highway research, as narrators, the tour included New Jersey's "cloverleaf" maze of highways, dual-lane roads leading into New England, elevated systems throughout the metropolitan area of New York and the Holland Tunnel entering Manhattan under the Hudson River.

In line with current plans in Washington to construct a modern, high-speed elevated highway crossing Rock Creek Park and another connecting M street with Key Bridge in Georgetown, Dr. McClintock predicted that this type automotive travel will ultimately be adopted universally to eliminate congestion and reduce accidents.

Urges Necessity of Planning.

Even New York, said Dr. McClintock, is far behind in providing adequate facilities to take care of increasing automobile registrations. Traffic administrators and "those holding the country's purse strings must," he added, "awaken to the necessity of future planning for highways safety."

Final sessions of the safety seminar will be held tomorrow with Marian Telford, director of child safety for the National Safety Council; Prof. Amos Neyhart, driver training expert of State College, Pa., and Paul Hoffman, president of Studebaker Corporation and the Automotive Safety Foundation, will speak.

Boys Band to Play.

The Holy Comforter Boys Band will give a program at the cornerstone laying of St. Ann's School, Wisconsin and Nebraska avenues, Sunday afternoon at 1:15 o'clock. Bishop John M McNamara will be the speaker.

Edith Maxwell Loses Appeal in Father's Killing

Prepares to Serve Term of 20 Years; Mother Faints at News.

making a profane threat to murder her father when, according to the record, she had never made such a statement. In another, Defense Counsel Smith reminded the court that at Edith's trial, the prosecution was allowed to introduce in evidence an ax that was "like" one which it claimed Edith had used to kill her father. Later Judge Ezra Carter, who presided at the trial, ordered the ax evidence stricken.

Higher Appeal "Futile."

After the high court had announced its opinion, Attorney Smith said he thought it would be futile to carry the case to the United States Supreme Court.

When Smith reached the farm house near here, he was shocked at Edith's appearance. She was wan and thin, and she explained she had dropped from 130 pounds to 112 in the last few months.

"Well, we lost," said Smith.

"You couldn't help that," the girl replied.

She said she had one favor to ask.

"Please don't let them take me back to Wise before I go to the penitentiary. I am ready to serve my sentence, but I couldn't stand going back there to have them point at me, and stare at me and maybe laugh at me."

Attorney Smith said he didn't think it would be necessary for her to go back to Wise. The next step, he explained, would be for the Court of Appeals to send a mandate, or order, to the court at Wise for Edith's incarceration. This, he said, might take ten days or two weeks.

"You mean I don't have to go to jail right away?" Edith asked.

Smith assured her that this was so, and he then expressed the opinion that it would not be necessary for her to go to Wise if it could be arranged for her to surrender at the State penitentiary in Richmond. Ordinarily, he said, a guard would be sent from the penitentiary to Wise to arrest her.

Edith appeared resigned to a long period behind the bars. A girl quick to adapt herself, she even began thinking of what she might do in the penitentiary and of what she might do to rehabilitate herself afterward. She said that, if it were possible, she would try to learn office work or nursing while in prison. She is convinced that she can never teach school again, although plenty of men and women have written her to say they would help her in such a role whenever she is free.

Never Had Much Hope.

Edith said she never had held much hope for a third trial, and therefore had steeled herself for the news that came over the radio.

"Mama wanted to buy me a hat last week," she said. "I told her it would be foolish—that a hat wouldn't do me any good in the penitentiary."

In her first trial at Wise, Edith confessed that, while her father was beating her, she struck him over the head with a slipper. The slipper was submitted as evidence. The prosecution, however, insisted that some heavier weapon was used, although it couldn't definitely say what.

Edith was found guilty of first-degree murder and sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary.

Thereafter a defense fund was raised and Charles Henry Smith was retained to appeal the case. The State Supreme Court granted a new trial, saying the first-degree verdict was not justified. The second trial opened in Wise last December.

If Edith is a good convict, she ought to be free in nine years, by which time she would be 32. In Virginia, such a sentence is cut in half for good behavior.

It happened to me

—maybe, I was lucky.

It happened this way: I found myself in a run-down condition . . . I was listless . . . despondent . . . my appetite was lagging . . . I was losing weight.

I wasn't desperate, as I knew I had no organic trouble . . . but I was puzzled as to why I was losing ground.

I was lucky because a friend suggested that I try S.S.S. Tonic . . . she said it had greatly benefited her in building back her strength and now she felt like her old self again.

An interesting fact about S.S.S. Tonic is that 47.2% of those who take it, do so upon the recommendation of others who have themselves benefited by taking this great tonic.

There is a special reason why S.S.S. Tonic is beneficial in helping people get back their health . . . because it contains the precious mineral elements so vitally necessary for restoring deficient red-blood-cells. Moreover, S.S.S. Tonic whets the appetite and improves digestion, making for better use of food—a very important step back to health.

You, too, will want to take S.S.S. Tonic to regain and to maintain your red-blood-cells . . . to restore lost weight . . . to regain energy . . . to strengthen nerves . . . and to give your skin that natural health glow.

Take the S.S.S. Tonic treatment and shortly you should be delighted with the way you feel . . . and have your friends compliment you on the way you look.

Radio Prudery.

With the United States Public Health Service leading the attack, venereal disease today had seemed fairly well stripped of its insidious "hush-hush" camouflage. At least it had seemed certain that no censorship would stand in the way of a discussion of syphilis such as confronted Surgeon General Parran in a radio studio only a few years ago. But apparently this is not entirely the case. The National Broadcasting Co. has forbidden Hugh Johnson to speak of "public enemies Nos. 1 and 2—syphilis and gonorrhea" over its airways.

While expressing sympathy for the objectives of the war against venereal disease, the broadcasting company declared it has found itself unable "to contribute to this campaign without seriously embarrassing the family group." Careful concern for the sensibilities of the radio public is commendable. This does not, however, condone prudery. And the company's attitude can be construed only as such when it is recalled that for more than a year local radio stations throughout the country have broadcast antivenereal disease programs without complaint from the public.

Moreover, polls such as that conducted in Chicago and the Nation-wide poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion have shown the public to be overwhelmingly in favor of an antisyphilis drive and all the publicity such a campaign implies. Finally, the newspapers have proved that venereal disease can be discussed constructively and still decently in public.

When typhoid fever is mentioned there is no connotation of the medical fact that the disease is commonly transmitted by fecal matter entering the mouth; until syphilis and gonorrhea can be similarly discussed without regard for the incidental means of their transmission, campaigns against them will be seriously handicapped. As important publicity institutions of the day, radio companies sidestep an obligation when they fail to lead the public in such frankness.

The New Housing Policy.

No business recession should have been necessary to stimulate official interest in a national housing program based on private enterprise. For several years it has been evident that the construction of dwellings for families of moderate income offers one of the most promising fields for the employment of idle men and money. The Administration's delay in recognizing this fact is now overshadowed, however, by the hopeful indications that a constructive policy is about to be formulated.

In some respects the new movement appears to be an outgrowth of the slum clearance act approved during the last session of Congress. Of course, the two programs are separate. But until Congress buckled down to the task of enacting a practical slum clearance measure there seemed to be a vague belief that the Government itself could solve the housing problem without relying upon private industry. With that illusion shattered because of the limited Federal funds available for housing, the need for a supplementary program has been sharply emphasized.

Slum clearance is necessarily slow and complicated. Because it offers no monetary profit and often requires subsidies, it must be undertaken by governmental agencies. General home construction for families of moderate incomes can move much more rapidly. In this case there should be no subsidies. Undoubtedly private industry can supply all needs in this field if given the proper financial machinery. Since the activities of the USHA will aid only families in the lowest income groups, there should be no competition between the two programs. Indeed, they should have a mutually stimulating effect.

Confidence in the new committee will be inspired by its personnel as well as by its practical approach to housing as an economic problem. Apparently its aim is to make capital more readily available to large-scale projects, to encourage the organization of responsible companies for the development of planned communities instead of isolated building lots, and to reduce the costs of building wherever possible. Construction costs are automatically reduced by large-scale operations. Labor can be employed throughout the year at more reasonable wages, selling expenses can be reduced, and there are good prospects that interest charges can be substantially cut as a result of the greater security which planned communities and Federal insurance offer to mortgage lenders.

Fortunately, the FHA has already made considerable progress in the insurance of mortgages on large-scale projects of the low-cost type. But this sort of development has been handicapped by technical defects in the act and lack of capital in large amounts. If the Administration merely puts into effect the amendments to the FHA program already worked out by some members of the President's committee, private building would be given an effective stimulus. And if a truly comprehensive policy is evolved, it may well become the most important factor in turning economic trends upward once more.

Mr. Morgenthau's Assurances.

It was inevitable that a certain amount of skepticism should greet Secretary Morgenthau's remarks on the curtailment of Government spending, as delivered before the Academy of Political Science in New York on Wednesday night. His audience had just listened to a stinging indictment of the Administration's deficit financing by Senator Byrd, of Virginia. And it had savored the full justice of Mr. Byrd's statement that: "We have talked economy but nothing has been done about it."

With the appalling debt figures cited by the Virginia Senator embedded in the minds of his listeners, Secretary Morgenthau had for answer only more talk about the desirability of economy. His was a very good speech, as speeches go, but its weakness was that it could only give assurances where results are essential. It was only talk. And, as Senator Byrd had bitingly observed: "Talk neither pays debts nor reduces expenses."

So far as talk alone can be reassuring, however, the remarks of Secretary Morgenthau were all to the good. He came out flatly in behalf of "a determined movement toward a balanced budget." He put the Administration squarely on record against continuation of the discredited "pump-priming" policy. And he advocated specific economies—in highway construction, general public works, wasteful relief expenditures and Federal aid to agriculture. Out of such economies he believes a saving of $700,000,000 could be effected in the next fiscal year.

If Senator Byrd's pessimistic forecasts are justified even such cuts will fall far short of achieving budgetary balance. But they would at least accomplish a reversal of direction on that road to bankruptcy down which, by President Roosevelt's own definition, the Nation is now headed. Mr. Morgenthau's fears lest the country should move "too rapidly" in the direction of solvency need not disturb him seriously. The problem, as shown by the immediate reaction of some of the self-styled "liberals," will be to achieve any curtailment of what Senator Byrd calls "the most costly and wasteful bureaucracy in the history of the United States."

Probably the most encouraging remark in Mr. Morgenthau's speech was the assertion that "the basic need today is to foster the full application of the driving force of private capital." The truth of this is incontestable. Various measures and practices applied in the appealing name of reform have so weakened American business that its vitality in confronting the present recession is obviously low. It is all too easy to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs, and this the Secretary of the Treasury seems fully to recognize.

"We want to see capital go into the productive channels of private industry," says Mr. Morgenthau. "We want to see private business expand. We believe that much of the remaining unemployment will disappear as private capital funds are increasingly employed in productive enterprises."

Those are welcome assurances, possibly indicating an end to the fanatical policy of baiting business which is bringing its inevitable fruits in the set-back now so apparent and so disturbing. If the Secretary of the Treasury can be interpreted as meaning that the country is to be allowed to confront economic difficulties with its energies unfettered the results will be an upsurge of optimism. But it cannot be forgotten that other assurances to this effect have in the past come to nothing.

Financing The Farm Program.

Members of the House Agriculture and Ways and Means Committees have been discussing the advisability of levying processing taxes to finance the new farm-control program.

At once the question arises whether such impositions could be safely voted in view of the decision in the Hoosac Mills case which resulted in the downfall of the original AAA. In that case the Supremo Court made it very clear that the power to tax could not be employed as a means of attaining ends prohibited by the Constitution. As the crop-control program was held to be an unconstitutional invasion of a field reserved to the States, it followed that the processing taxes were likewise invalid.

Judging from reports, Congress will soon be presented with another crop-control plan embodying certain compulsory features more drastic than those of the invalidated AAA. Even if Congress should be so rash or so forgetful as to repeat its earlier mistakes, it may well hesitate to resort to a form of taxation that would invite an immediate test of the new legislation in the courts. In the interests of avoiding another upset to an already burdened budget, therefore, a general tax rather than a specific kind of levy would appear to be the more expedient.

Apart from the dubious constitutionality of processing taxes, moreover, there are serious economic objections to them. In periods of depression it is highly probable that processors required to pay these taxes would depress the prices of products bought from farmers. In other words, part of the burden of such taxes would be shifted back to farmers for whose benefit they were imposed. The consuming public would also be indirectly taxed in the form of higher prices for processed articles. Finally, the processor himself might find his operations curtailed as a result of the higher prices he would be compelled to charge for taxed products.

On the other hand, the alternative plan of financing an extended agricultural program by increases in general taxes on incomes or business is equally unacceptable. It certainly would not fit into the program of budget balancing and progressive reduction of expenditures advocated by Secretary Morgenthau.

The only thoroughly satisfactory solution of the question which now confronts Congress lies in a simple rejection of any agricultural program that would make excessive demands upon the Treasury. There would be no agricultural financing problem, in brief, if Congress and the Administration would agree to abandon costly and abortive efforts to raise farm prices and farm income by regulating agricultural production.

The Overturn In Brazil.

There are fashions in governments as well as in hats. This week, following a coup d'etat engineered by President Getulio Vargas, Brazil seemingly discarded the cloak of democracy for the garb of totalitarianism. But despite the German-Italian label pinned to the new regime at Rio, in essence it appears to be simply another variant of the familiar Latin-American pattern of dictatorship.

Nor is there the slightest evidence to support the widespread contention that the change of governmental systems in Brazil was a result of foreign Fascist intrigue.

The dictator has been a familiar figure on the Brazilian scene from the very outset of that country's history as a republic. Following the overthrow in 1888 of Dom Pedro II, the last Brazilian Emperor, Marshal Deodora da Fonseca became chief of the provisional government. He had been a prominent leader of the rebellion that upset the throne. But no sooner did he assume power than he began to rule dictatorially. And he was but the first of a long line to do so. Getulio Vargas is the latest.

Since Vargas' elevation to the Presidency in July, 1934, following the revolution of 1930 which he had led, Brazil has had only brief and intermittent glimpses of anything resembling democracy. The uprising of November, 1935, which was attributed to Communists, was followed by the establishment of a "state of war." There were wholesale imprisonments of political opponents, a rigid censorship and rule by arbitrary decree. Only this year, in fact, and then for but a few months, was martial law suspended.

For a brief period it did look as though Brazil was about to return to democratic ways. And it was hoped that at next January's election a peaceful transfer of power would take place. But President Vargas has persuaded himself or let himself be persuaded that none other than he could keep Brazil peaceful, orderly and prosperous. The "state of war" was re-established and the coup d'etat setting up a corporative state followed.

The fact that Brazil has adopted a Fascist form of government, even though it is different in only one essential particular—its label—from the dictatorial system under which that country has been governed for some time, is in itself a dangerous development. The contagion may spread. But it is far-fetched to believe that Wednesday's coup d'etat automatically places Brazil in the same camp, diplomatically or otherwise, as Italy and Germany.

An Idle Island Idyll.

Paul Gaugin had a pretty miserable time in the South Seas. So did two Michigan couples who went to Tahiti last year to escape the monotony of Main Street. But in spite of Maugham and Michigan, man continues to dream of staking off a small island for himself where he can spend half his time sleeping and the other half just puttering around. Alas, realism is always rearing its ugly head and taking the joy out of life. In this instance, it's a story published this week in the Christian Science Monitor which pictures the seamy side of island existence.

Romanticists will do well to take a few notes from this dispatch. According to it, there are certain islands in the Pacific, such as the Palmerstons, on which there are no matches, no cloth, no livestock, and worst blow of all, no coconuts. Romance can stand a lot of adversity but an empty stomach is not one of them. It is doubtful if even the redoubtable Robinson Crusoe could have passed into legend on such slim pickings as this.

But even though the most energetic Chamber of Commerce would have a hard time finding inducements in the face of these facts, there is one so-called hardship to Palmerston Islanders which might seem a haven to the rest of a harassed world. That is the lack of regular news. Imagine not having to figure out whether Mrs. de Bower is going to marry Mr. Raffray after Mrs. Raffray marries Mr. Simpson now that Mrs. Simpson is married to the Duke of Windsor.

Ditching The Duke.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please let me call your attention to the fact that Joseph P. McCurdy and Francis J. Gorman did not write those resolutions attacking Charles E. Bedaux as a guide for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. That claim was just a smoke screen.

The evil hand of the political enemies of the duke inspired British agents to write that protest. British agents used the same methods that they used in inciting the Indians to rebel against the United States (sic) before 1776. The same England was at work that bought the allegiance of the Indians and then closed her forts against them and left them to their doom.

William Green, the president of the A. F. of L., did not know about the protest until he saw it in print. Let McCurdy and Gorman explain to the satisfaction of all just what was the consideration that caused them to let themselves be used as the cat's-paw for the political enemies of the duke. I, for one, would like to know.

An Italian View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Italy at Brussels," and others, show Italy as a treaty breaker and other unlawful acts toward disturbing the peace of mind of the angelic democracies, England and France. "Let us look at the record."

In 1915 there was a treaty signed by Italy, England and France called the "London Treaty," promising Italy this and that if she would join them against Germany, and she did. She won the war for them at Vittorio Veneto. Then came Versailles, and Italy received for her efforts the well-known kick in the pants. Italy has been demanding that England and France live up to the agreement ever since.

At the great banquet at Versailles England and France gobbled everything by taking over all the German colonies. This has led, however, to great indigestion. They claim fascism is the cause. But they have forgotten that one reaps what he sows. ALFIO CARTA.

"Real Public Service."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You rendered a real public service by publication of the two articles exposing Communist manipulations to capture the personnel of the merchant marine.

On March 4 of this year I submitted evidence to the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries relative to the shifting of the Communist School for Seamen from 140 Broad street, New York City, to Camp Nitgedaiget, at Beacon, N. Y. The evidence then submitted included copy of a "Guide for Communist Work Aboard Ship" (see pages 346, 357 and 358 of the published hearings).

I regret that at least two members of the committee seemed to resent the introduction of this testimony, which clearly showed the sinister propaganda of the Communist Party among American merchant seamen.

Plea For Tolerance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is Armistice Day. We will lay a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Eighteen years ago the writer caused a lot of comment through the medium of a letter printed in the columns of The Post, in which he made reference to the fact that the Unknown Hero might have been a colored soldier.

Today in the shadow of the Capitol the American citizen who bears the skin color of Negro ancestry is more discriminated against than any foreigner or un-American hyphenated citizen. Separate schools still exist. Few churches are as liberal as were those post-Civil War churches in the practice of Christianity, as it applies in race relationships. Thirty years ago a colored citizen could attend upon the cultural entertainments of music, art and drama in the halls of our city.

Since Armistice Day in 1918, the restrictions and barriers are greater. Only by standing at the hot-dog counter of the 5-cent stores can a colored man or woman get anything to eat in the down-town section of Washington. Years ago the writer remembers when the youth of all races played freely in the fields, streets and roads in Washington; today, organized play has completely separated and antagonized the youth. Only in one sport has there been freedom of entry by all races, and that happens when an outside agency like the A. A. U. has been in charge.

Our schools spend a lot of time teaching children through the medium of exchange of letters to be tolerant and understanding of the peoples of Holland, Russia, China, Siam and Japan. Do not our children see the hypocrisy when we fail to develop a tolerance for people of different racial and religious affiliations in our fertile neighborhood relations.

Psychics In Washington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under the caption, "Protest From a Spiritualist Pastor," published in your "Letters to the Editor" section on November 2, we note a letter from the pastor of the First Spiritualist Church of Washington, D. C. The pastor protests against the action of the police "arresting one of the regularly ordained ministers of the religion of spiritualism on the charge of telling fortunes without paying license."

The pastor also writes: "We Spiritualists, at a public hearing before members of Congress, influenced them to add an amendment to the fortune telling law, which entirely freed our regularly ordained ministers and their appointed representatives from its action." The pastor neglects to add that the law stipulates: "ministers and their accredited representatives" are exempt from paying occupational license tax provided their activities are "not for personal gain."

The pastor writes: "The point is that the expression of prophecy is a vital part of the manifestations and revelations of the religion of spiritualism and it would be impossible to curtail or remove it without dooming the movement to destruction. This fact is well known by the enemies of spiritualism who seek to undermine it." Surely the pastor does not believe that the Metropolitan Police Department or any other department of the District seeks the destruction of, are enemies of, or wish to undermine the religion of spiritualism or any other religion.

The Maritime Stories.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In recent years it has become the fashionable thing to do to be at least communistic. During this time the mere mention of the word without a tone of reverence is regarded as red-baiting or the old red herring. In your letter columns of November 9 you ran the criticism, or rather the crucifixion, of one of your reporters who merely attempted to report the news unbiasedly. I am referring to that masterpiece signed "Virginian."

For some reason "Virginian" did not believe that the Red Annapolis is in existence. At the same time he was lambasting Mr. Folliard, he credited him with having the sort of imagination that Hollywood is paying big money for. Apparently the man has missed his calling. It was not enough that Folliard's scoop was one of the best pieces of newspaper work displayed by a Washington paper this year. Or was it enough that the Algic story proved its merits by starting the most vigorous house-cleaning in our lousy merchant marine that has ever taken place?

"Virginian," with his great insight of labor and maritime problems (if there are any), has set himself up as a greater authority on these questions than the lawfully appointed officers or the men who have studied and seen them. He, without knowing anything about the evidence against the Algic men, has decided that the Government's case is not valid.

As an advocate of democratic government I recognize the right of anyone to speak their mind. But I think at least that those people who elect to do so should take the trouble to find out what they are talking about before they contaminate the reading matter of thinking men and women. I defy "Virginian," or anyone else, to disprove any phase of Folliard's maritime series, and if he can I will supply the salt to preserve the red herring that I am sure The Post will only be too willing to return to its closet. Hoover And Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. E. S. Reynolds attributes white-livered propensities to those who venture to suggest that Hoover remain withdrawn for the good of his party in '40. For reasons clearly set forth in a letter to which Mr. Reynolds takes exception, I reiterate that suggestion. Naturally the complete unraveling of the New Deal or its discrediting in the mind of the forgotten man may render such discretion unnecessary.

But to wage a fight doomed to be unavailing because of errors of psychology in its course is the essence of stupidity in politics, no matter what nobility of character, steam-laundered principles, genuineness or capability may feature its actors.

Shortly before election a New Deal legislator stumping for Roosevelt astonished me by admitting: "I consider Hoover the world's bummest politician but the ablest and best equipped man who ever sat in the White House. His turn as Secretary of Commerce is added proof of that. But take an old ward heeler's word, he'll cost his party a million votes if he messes up in this. He's meat for the tricky politician and the blaster. The herd won't even listen to his speeches. They make sense!"

In baseball they'd call Hoover a ball player's ball player. But you need flash—yes, and the bunk called showmanship—to drag the mob past the turnstiles. Republicans should not forget this next election.

In Defense Of Dr. Carrie Smith

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a teacher in the public schools of the District and as a friend of Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, I wish to protest against the recent summary dismissal of Dr. Smith from the superintendency of the National Training School for Girls.

During the summer of 1936 I spent six weeks as volunteer teacher of English in this institution, working with the 17 colored girls there. I saw how the school was being conducted as a modern penal institution, how these unfortunates were treated as human beings and how they were taught to attempt a reconstruction of their misdirected lives.

Surely if the public understood Dr. Smith's indefatigable efforts to help her charges; her struggles to secure regular, trained teachers, working the year round, to give instruction in the domestic arts which would enable the pupils, when free, to earn a decent living; and the various opportunities provided so that the girls might learn what is expected of them as rehabilitated citizens, the demand for Dr. Smith's reinstatement would be so persistent that the Welfare Board would be forced to heed it. A. M. W.
Washington, Nov. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Whereas, Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith has secured many improvements for the National Training School for Girls during the time she served as superintendent of that institution, and

Whereas, Dr. Smith had not been in charge of the National Training School long enough for her technique of juvenile delinquent care to be adequately tested, and

Whereas, the general public had no knowldge of unsatisfactory conditions at the school except in highly exaggerated stories published in certain local newspapers, and

Whereas, Dr. Smith was discharged from her position as superintendent of the school suddenly, and without the justification for such action being set forth, and

Whereas, the general public is entitled to know the reasons for the dismissal of Dr. Smith, and to hear the charges answered by Dr. Smith, and

Whereas, the general public is entitled to know something of the various procedures for juvenile delinquent care, and certainly to have some knowledge of the practices which have been used and the future practices which are intended for this public institution,

Therefore, be it resolved by the executive committee of the Lester F. Ward Sociological Society, George Washington University, that an impartial investigation and public hearing be held to determine the reasons for dismissal of Dr. Smith, whether or not the dismissal was justified, and to reveal whether or not Dr. Smith's liberal policy of rehabilitation is to be replaced by the psychology of force and punishment which prevailed before Dr. Smith assumed her duties at the institution. The Post Impressionist

Halifax Horror.

FEW are the cities that have no local disaster legends for the "old-timers" to relive of a cold winter's night around a crackling fire.

San Francisco, with its earthquake and fire of 1906; Chicago, scene of Mrs. O'Leary's cow and the Iroquois and the Eastland; Cleveland, of the Collinwood School and the Clinic; Miami and its hurricanes; New York's "General Slocum;" Washington with its Knickerbocker shambles and Terra Cotta wreck—and Halifax.

Remember Halifax? I had almost forgotten it, too, when I arrived in Nova Scotia's Capital one day several weeks ago preparatory to welcoming home Dr. William M. Mann and his shipload of zoo animals. But my memory of the explosion that took 1,600 lives was jogged sharply ere I had been in town 24 hours, that's how proud (perhaps this isn't quite the word) the burghers are to point out souvenirs and go over the harrowing tragedy in detail.

* * * *

Catastrophes are horrible in the experiencing but fertile conversation material in retrospect. Time can work such healing miracles that the man who, surviving an earthquake or a sinking or a hurricane, solemnly vows to put the thing out of his mind forever, willingly finds himself 20 years later telling all about it to a saucer-eyed grandchild or at the monthly meeting of the pioneers' society.

And so it is not strange that Haligonians are anything but reluctant to answer questions about the consequences of the collision between the French munitions ship Mont Blanc, with 1,000 tons of TNT and 4,000 tons of other explosives in her holds, and the Norwegian steamer Imo on the morning of December 6, 1917.

When you run out of questions, they will gladly suggest others and then come through with the answers. They will, too, show you a several-hundred-pound chunk of the Mont Blanc's anchor which was blown more than 4 miles across the city; point out wreckage fragments still protruding from walls of downtown stores and churches, and relate breath-taking details of the escape of this aunt or that cousin or, perhaps, themselves.

A resident showed me a remarkable example of accidental portraiture. In the heart of the business section, several miles south of the scene of the blast, is an historic church with a well-defined profile of a man apparently etched into one of the stained glass windows. The explosion was responsible. The window is composed of a double layer of glass. The outside layer was undisturbed by the terrific concussion, but the inner one shattered, leaving that uncanny profile.

The section of ship's anchor referred to previously lies near the banks of the Northwest Arm, that lovely offshoot of Halifax Harbor. A short distance away is Memorial Tower, only 60 or 70 feet high, but affording a splendid view up and down the "Arm," with its pleasure craft. Examining the ugly length of iron from the Mont Blanc, I marveled that fate spared the entire crew of the munitions-laden steamer, while spreading frightful death among women and children on shore a mile away.

* * * *

The Mont Blanc, bound out of New York, was passing through the narrows only a few miles from her destination—Bedford Basin. The relief ship Imo had her bow pointed seaward. She crashed into the port side of the Mont Blanc. But there was no explosion for 20 minutes, giving both crews time to abandon ship.

The Washington Post of December 7, 1917, was splashed with vivid accounts of the disaster:

"Persons in the streets were picked up bodily and hurled to the ground . . . whole blocks of dwellings were leveled . . . in the Richmond section the scenes enacted defied description . . . several children were crushed to death when they were hurled against telegraph poles by the force of the explosion . . . at Truro, 75 miles away, windows were shattered . . . an electric tram car passing the vicinity at the time was blown off the track and the motorman, conductor and all passengers killed."

A few weeks hence will fall the twentieth anniversary of the most dreadful explosion in North American history, giving Haligonians a fresh excuse to revive tales of that black Thursday. Having "hustled extras" on the streets of Indianapolis the day of the blast, so that I always had a fair recollection of it, and being so recently steeped in its lore, I feel almost like a survivor myself.

Give Nature A Chance.

When asked what interests me most in this cockeyed world, I must qualify the mere statement that it is hunting and fishing. It is more than that. It is a program of restoration which will again make real hunting and fishing perpetual and at the same time recapture our eroding hillsides, polluted streams and man-made deserts, and bring them back to pleasant and useful purposes.

The precepts upon which wild life restoration may be accomplished are simple enough. They are:

(1) Don't shoot more than you raise. (2) Ducks do not make their nests on fence posts. (3) Fish, with the exception of that exotic immigrant known as German carp, do not do their best in an environment predominated by sewage and sludge from industrial plants. (4) Most engineers who design our water-use programs have remained in ignorance of these facts. (5) There is plenty of opportunity to provide natural breeding of both fish and game without disrupting the profitable pursuit of industry and agriculture. (6) There aren't enough incubators in the world to supply the demand.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Man in the Armored Car.

SUPPOSE someone on the order of Huey Long became President, with a majority in Congress ready to ratify any crazy idea of his in return for some personal graft and some mock jobs for their good-for-nothing relatives.

PEGLER.

The President would have a lot of press agents at work for him, pounding away on the notion, advanced by the New Deal press agents, that the election returns were a blank check mandate and that the party majority in Congress had no right to turn down any proposal sent over from the White House, no matter what. That would relieve them of all responsibility, and, encouraged by precedent, they would demand a cut on all the insurance and bonding business pledged by people and big corporations desiring to stand in with the Government and a kick-back on liquor and radio permits and a percentage on all public orders for school books, office supplies, building materials, paving contracts and just everything.

• • • •

THEY WOULD stick their unsuccessful brothers-in-law and rum-pot cousins and their sons and daughters and their wives onto the pay rolls of private companies for doing nothing or merely going through the motions of doing something, and this would become notorious in the land, but the President and the majority in Congress would just laugh at the shrill protests of the minority that all this was dishonest and sinful.

Encouraged by precedent, they would refuse to use their power to expose the details of the graft, and the Administration press agent, taking a cue from the pioneers in this line of justification under cover of the sacred mandate from the majority, would say that it was petty and reactionary to mention such trifling imperfections in the execution of great, fundamental reforms intended to make every man a king.

A few scrappy individuals in private business would try to refuse the demands of the majority statesmen for jobs for their relatives and try to place their insurance and bonding business with their old and trusted agents. But after a while they would find their own customers drifting off to deal with firms enjoying the approval of the Administration and if they still resisted would find their taxes raised arbitrarily.

Firms and individuals would be jerked into court under indictments charging violation of the income tax, also with the sanction of the very distinguished precedent, and after a while all but a few stubborn die-hards would be going around to call on some pal of the President—someone with no particular office in the Administration, but just a confidential access to the White House—to see if the trouble couldn't be straightened out.

SO THE confidential pal would say, "Why, sure; it was silly to have trouble, because, after all, it was cheaper by far to go along with the boys in their great patriotic plan than to pay lawyers and accountants to battle away in the courts. And the loss of business and the constant state of upsetment were certainly too great a price to pay for mere stubbornness. So why not be reasonable and toss that insurance and bonding business over to the right party, who was, after all, a great kid if you got to know him?"

Well, all right, and then what about the income tax indictments? Oh, well, on second thought they seem to have been the result of overzealousness by an ambitious young lawyer in the Treasury, out to make a name for himself, and purely technical in character. And, anyway, didn't you ever hear of the Louisiana Purchase? Not the first one, but the second one. A very important precedent—the Second Louisiana Purchase.

• • • •

OF COURSE, there would be a few obstreperous anti-Administration statesmen in Congress who would want to sink a pick into the crust on the scandal and let out some of the fumes, but again, according to precedent, the majority, pursuant to the second mandate, would refuse to let them have the floor unless they first agreed not to raise questions intended to embarass the Administration and obstruct the great humanitarian reform.

Strange precedents are accumulating rapidly, and when, finally, the proposition is established that a popular majority constitutes a mandate superseding the responsibility and duty of Congress, everything will be all set for the man in the armored car.

The Once Over

H. I. Phillips

Farmer Franklin.

("When asked his occupation, the President replied 'Farmer.'"—News item.)

A farmer am I, nothing less,
And very little more;
I see no reason, I confess,
For doubts upon that score.
I point to all the things I raise—
(Ask any business man!)—
New things I grow each day amaze

II.

I am a tiller of the soil
By instinct, birth and will.
'Tho Tories say (they make me boil)
I'd rather soil the till
I love the simple mooly cow,
Its milk so rich with fat,
And think each good milk-giver now
A Grade A Democrat.

III.

I like to hear the roosters crow
With lungs so strong and stout;
I give 'em as I think you know,
Enough to crow about.
The chickens cackling merrily
Is music to my ears;
Although I think the G. O. P.
Lays bigger eggs, my dears.

IV.

The hoeking of the geese all day
Brings happiness and peace
(I guess nobody here can say
I do not know my geese);
A piggery is rather grand—
The hogs I like to see—
They make me think of Tories and
Some foes of high degree.

V.

I love the song of birds and bees,
The miracle of honey
(How can some people pass up these
To think of things like money?)
I love to watch the turtle drift—
He fascinates me so;
How can he pull his neck in swift?—
I really'd like to know!

VI.

A farmer am I every inch,
Down to the deepest core;
To grow two blades I think a cinch
Where but one grew before;
I love the farm horse, yes, I do,
As through the field I go,
And much prefer "Giddap!" it's true,
To any call of "Whoa!"

VII.

So cut yourself an ear of corn
And take a swig of cider,
A farmer I, a farmer born,
Who loves the spaces wider;
East, West, North, South together—
And everything will be all right—
If I get proper weather!

Unholy Alliance

By Livingston Hartley.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE NEW triple front against communism, signed at Rome by the representatives of Germany, Italy and Japan to the tune of newspaper adulation of its combined military might, can only be regarded as a direct menace to our kind of civilization.

Its three participants form the 10 per cent who are threatening a breakdown of international order and law," stigmatized in the President's Chicago speech, their hands reddened with the blood of innocent civilians in three continents and their footsteps littered with the torn fragments of treaties and written engagements. We have already witnessed what Mussolini, Hitler and the military rulers of Japan can do to peace and order individually; what does it mean to the world when they promise to work together?

There appears at first sight some parallel between this new combination and the Holy Alliance formed by Austria, Russia and Prussia after the fall of Napoleon to oppose the principles of democracy and nationalism. Both groups practiced intervention in weaker countries on behalf of an ideology. The interventionists of a century ago, moreover, furnished the occasion for the announcement of the Monroe Doctrine; those of today may bring this doctrine back to the headlines as a live issue in world affairs.

Austria, Russia, Prussia Aimed Only At Continent.

BUT THE differences between these two combinations are far more salient than the similarities. The old one applied in practice only to Europe, whereas the new one covers the world. The purpose of the Holy Alliance, furthermore, was clear for all to see; that of the new "unholy alliance" is very different from what it professes to be.

It is apparent to all objective observers that the golden opportunity of the Bolshevik comintern abroad passed with the depths of the depression and the peak of unemployment. The general upswing in capitalistic countries in the last four years, contrasting with continued hardship and the recent orgy of "liquidations" in Russia, has destroyed most of the former attraction of Moscow for leftist elements abroad. A similar opportunity for the comintern could only recur with another breakdown of capitalism, either through a new depression as bad as the last or a general war.

If the three aggressive powers really sought to eliminate all prospect of communism outside Russia they would work for peace, stability and prosperity in the capitalist world. But they are doing precisely the opposite in order to advance the ambitions of their rulers. They are indulging in military aggression and creating constant war threats at both ends of Eurasia, while simultaneously holding back prosperity by seeking economic autarchy and forcing the world to rearm.

We must look for the real purpose of the "anti-Communist" front in its actions, not its propaganda. When Germany and Japan laid the cornerstone for the present agreement a year ago their action was primarily directed against Russia. A threat to Russia on both flanks was designed to facilitate Japanese expansion in China and German aims in Europe.

Italy, however, can do little to threaten Russia. Her entrance into this partnership indicates an enlarged objective—the British Empire and France. London and Paris are liable to shrink from any forceful steps in the Mediterranean if such steps might lead to a Japanese attack upon their weakly defended Pacific territories. They are similarly unlikely to adopt a strong position in the Far East if their imperial arteries are menaced near home by an ally of Japan. Both, moreover, must now face the prospect that effective opposition to Hitler's aims in central or eastern Europe may confront them with rattling sabers on three separate fronts.

Rome And Tokyo Seen Cooling To London Offers.

THE GRAVITY of this situation, both for them and the world, is underlined by the fact that Japan and Italy have chosen to announce their new partnership from the housetops. This suggests that Rome and Tokyo have decided to turn their backs upon a compromise settlement with London, and gives weight to a view adopted recently in some informed circles, namely, that Mussolini, angered by continued British opposition to his Mediterranean policies, has finally decided that "Mare Nostrum" must be created by force.

The new team of "have-nots" formed at Rome, consists, however, of something more than a line designed to check all efforts of the defensive side to break up plays. It comprises as well a triple-threat backfield of proven ground gainers whose specialty is interference.

Spain and China have already shown the type of plays we must expect to see in future seasons. Intervention in Europe and invasion in Asia bear the banner of "anti-communism," but seek in reality to advance national aims. A Franco Spain is expected to enhance Fascist power in Europe by threatening the imperial communications of Britain and France, while Japanese conquests of Chinese provinces will imperil Russia's hold on the Pacific as well as the Asiatic interests of Britain, France and the United States.

Mussolini proclaimed in Berlin on September 28 that "the Europe of tomorrow will be Fascist by the logical sequence of events." We have seen some of these events in Spain, as well as the new methods of "frightfulness" which the airplane has placed in the hands of ruthless regimes. Another event in the sequence is doubtless the present pact, designed to paralyze the opposition of more peaceful governments and to guarantee "protection" to the lesser states of Europe when, and only when, they fall into line.

That Europe must face the prospect of new Fascist intervention in democratic countries is apparent even from the published portions of the agreement. Czechoslovakia, for instance, may be "jointly invited" under Article 2 "to embark upon measures for warding off" the "disruptive activities of the Communist Internationale." Should Prague then be so rash as to turn down this invitation, she may very soon be engaged in a military struggle with "anti-Communist" "volunteers" from beyond her frontiers.

The lesser European dictatorships, on the other hand, may be afforded powerful support against internal opposition, labeled "communistic" for this purpose, at the price of participation in the Fascist bloc by adherence to the present pact. A strategically valuable field for intervention of this kind could be found in Greece and Yugoslavia.

Alliance Affects U. S. Interests In Latin America.

SHIFTING our gaze from Europe nearer home, we can see that the new league of aggressive powers strikes directly at the interests of the United States from three separate angles: its influence on Latin America, its menace of a new world war, and its effect on American neutrality during such a war.

1. Fascist stirrings are audible even now in Latin America, where the "personalista" regime of politics furnishes favorable ground for its growth. Since the ruling classes in most of the Spanish-speaking countries are ardent partisans of Gen. Franco, his triumph in their motherland by the grace of Mussolini and Hitler must give fascism a powerful impetus in our hemisphere. Brazil may be less affected by events in Spain, but Germany, Italy and a local form of Fascism have already made more headway there than in adjacent countries. The new type of government announced by President Vargas suggests an ominous trend toward "totalitarian" dictatorship.

We have always opposed, under the Monroe Doctrine, the extension by European powers of "their system" into our hemisphere. What will we do if Berlin and Rome aid Latin-American Fascist movements with supplies of money, arms and even "volunteers?" What will we do if some South American government joins the Eurasian "anti-Communist" bloc? What price "isolation" under such conditions?

2. The Tokyo-Berlin-Rome tie-up obviously enhances the danger of another world conflagration because it facilitates aggression and because it implies that war between great powers will extend across Eurasia. Most Americans realize now that such a war would damage us most seriously even if we succeeded in remaining ourselves at peace.

3. Neutrality, however, would be far more difficult to maintain than it was last time, no matter how many laws we write. We must now expect Japan to be an enemy instead of an ally of Britain and France, enabled by virtually undisputed command of the Pacific to "inherit" all their smaller possessions in that ocean. Quite apart from European issues, it appears unlikely that we would be willing to permit Japan to establish naval bases in the Anglo-French chain of islands which stretch from Australia to the Marquesas and thereby create a future menace to the Panama Canal and communications between the canal and Hawaii.

A Dixie Diary

By Pendleton Hogan

After The War.

MORE AND MORE is the white light of literary interest being turned on the South. Time and death, the two most perfect destroyers of hatred, have had 72 years since the end of the War Between the States to heal wounds and to fade scars. All in all they have done a good job. Being left a shambles, the South was forced to admit the old order had changed and to face the terrifying process of reconstruction. How well this was accomplished may be decided from the fact that, though barriers are no longer insurmountable, today we have the South divided into the same three general classes that existed before the war.

There are the poor whites and Negroes in the piney woods, in the small towns and in the squalid sections of Southern cities; there is the solid middle class, the "backbone of America," on farms, in the towns and cities; and there is the "upper class." In this group were the wealthy Southern planters who throve before the war, some of whom pitifully survived it and many of whose descendants, with less grandeur, live today. The white light has shone on all of these. Once again it goes back and turns on all of them collectively.

In 1906 there appeared a book called "Dixie After the War" by Myrta Lockett Avary. Now, 31 years later, Mrs. Avary's book is republished, and by one of those ubiquitous but seldom understood twists of public fancy, finds its second debut more propitious than its first.

• • • •

"DIXIE AFTER THE WAR" is a factual account of the social upheaval, of the enforced changes in ways of living and of the terrible privations of the South for 12 long years after Appomattox. The book is filled with illuminating descriptions of conditions at that time, with incidents of interest to any American concerned at all with the history of his country and with sidelights on the vanquished great of the South. In a brief preface the publishers call this work a "literary forerunner" to such books as "Gone With the Wind." Whether Miss Mitchell ever saw "Dixie After the War" or not there is a striking similarity between her description of Atlanta during the reconstruction and of Mrs. Avary's description of Richmond at the same time.

Mrs. Avary is a Virginian, and the material in her book was gathered over a long period of time. In the days when she was a girl after the war she absorbed the stories told by her father, her brothers and the family guests. In addition to this, much of her information was acquired from family correspondence, from conversation with a wide Southern acquaintanceship and from diaries written during the years described. There is an unmistakable stamp of authenticity in even the book's minute details.

For some readers the book may appear to hold too intense a feeling of sectionalism. Those readers should remember that the war was fought in the South, and that the South paid for it in a way never clearly understood by the North as a whole. The author has exerted obvious effort to be fair, and to present a correct and truthful picture of perhaps the most extraordinary period in our national life.

AS COROLLARIES to the political or economic changes discussed, Mrs. Avary gives illustrative examples that prove her point. One lady's diary states, "Prices were absurd. I paid $75 for a paper of pins and thought it high, but before the war was over, I was thankful to get a paper for $100." Later this same lady took in sewing to support herself, and wrote, "I sew early and late. My friends who are better off give me work, paying me as generously as they can. Mammy Jane has sold some of my embroideries to Northern ladies." One young bride raised lettuce, radishes and nasturtiums in her back yard for sale, and then gave the lettuce toward paying the church debt. She had nothing else to give. Such was the spirit of Southern women of that time.

Nor were the men any better off. Col. Cary came home to find his family assets consisting of an apple tree and a cow. Mrs. Cary baked apple pies and the colonel sold them to Yankee officers. One Charleston gentleman peddled tea by the pound and molasses by the quart to his former slaves. Gen. Stephen Elliott, the defender of Fort Sumter, sold fish and oysters which he caught himself. Gen. Lee declined gifts and accepted a small teaching post. Writing in December, 1865, Mrs. Lee said, ". . . he is willing to do anything that will give him an honorable support."

MOST OF THIS story is familiar to all literate persons south of the Mason-Dixon line. They have read it, they have heard it told by old people who remember it. But each year finds fewer old people left who actually saw conditions as Mrs. Avary describes them. For this reason alone "Dixie After the War" is a worthwhile book. It is written with full appreciation of a necessary balance between pathos, sympathy and even humor. Future historians and novelists writing about the South will find it a valuable source of material, both as an historical chronicle and as an apt commentary of social manners in the South after the war. Mrs. Avary is to be thanked for putting so much into one volume.

Tom McCarthy

THE FIRST round is over. And I guess everybody figures that it went off pretty well. But I do think that the boys up in the Annapolis Hotel ought to be tipped off not to take it too seriously.

All the engineers at WOL were on strike yesterday, but the engineers in the transmitting room at the Annapolis were virtually entrenched. They were holding their fort with a vengeance.

TOM McCARTHY.

In fact, if you only saw the "sit-down" strike as enacted at the main studio, in the Heurich Building, you might have got the wrong idea. Up there, it was just a genial party.

Of course, there's no reason why a "sit-down" strike shouldn't be run off in an atmosphere of jollity and rejoicing. But it was sort of a mean trick on the three engineers cooped up in the transmitting room at the Annapolis. They were just too far from the base of operations at the Heurich Building to realize that they were way out of line. They didn't get into the spirit of the thing at all.

Up at the Heurich Building all four engineers sat around in the control room, and drank soft drinks. They lounged back in the streamlined metal chairs and called their wives and girl friends on the phone. And when they got a little tired of that, they wandered down the hall to pass the time of day with the office force.

Reporters and photographers wandered in and out and union organizers were constantly being mistaken for radio announcers. However, it was all in good fun and nobody got mad.

There was a little feeling, though, when they began to take pictures of the announcers.

"Look at that publicity hound," said one of the engineers. "He's never been down to work at this time of day since I've been on the station. But now that they've got photographers to take pictures, he's right on the spot."

• • • •

THE FACT that their strike was being used for publicity sort of nettled the engineers. They all began pacing up and down the control room.

"Why don't you boys play some records on the turntables . . . to pass the time?" I asked them.

That suggestion didn't go over so well. In fact, I feared for a minute I might be thrown out of even so genial a "sit-down" gathering.

"Listen, mister," the red-headed engineer said, "we've been listening to records, day in and day out, until we're just a mite fed up. What're you trying to do, spoil our fun?"

"No sense being on strike, if you have to listen to music," one of the other engineers told me. "Yes, sir," he said, "this is the most peaceful day I've had in years. I haven't heard a bar of music."

Since the engineers have to listen to every program that goes out of a radio station, I could see their point.

But the "sit-down" strike up at WOL's main studios became altogether too genial. The announcers were trying to find out from the striking engineers where the checker-board was kept. And the office workers weren't getting a thing done, what with running in to see how things were going. And it did sort of take the edge off of things when the engineers insisted that they didn't want any pickets.

In fact, the most serious outbreak of the entire morning took place when somebody discovered that the big refrigerator was running out of soft drinks. And the engineers thought the announcers were responsible. And the office force looked with suspicion on everybody. But that was as close as the strike came to violence.

HOWEVER, as I said, the engineers on strike down at WOL'S transmitter in the Annapolis weren't playing the game. They weren't so genial.

Maybe the surroundings had something to do with it, because their transmitter room can't compare to the main studio control room. They haven't any streamlined chairs and their place is more for work than show. They thought a strike ought to be run in a businesslike fashion.

The fact that nobody came down to see them and that even the elevator boy didn't know they were "sitting down" didn't disturb them at all. If they were going to be "sit-down" strikers, they were going to do it right.

"Who's there?" they yelled through the closed door, when I came up to see them.

I told them, and they yelled back that they didn't have anything to say. They wouldn't talk. It was against orders.

"What're you doing in there?" I yelled.

"Nothing," they yelled back. "Nothing. We haven't been in here long enough to get restless."

And just about then, the boys in the transmitter room got word that a truce had been declared until 10 o'clock today. So they told me I could come in.

I knew by that time the engineers in the transmitter room were taking their strike seriously. But I didn't realize how seriously until I heard an awful commotion on the other side of the door preparatory to admitting me.

The embattled engineers were moving back the furniture they'd piled up against the door!

3 Brazilian Explorers To Be Luncheon Guests

The November meeting of the American Automobile Association's District of Columbia Motor Club's advisory board, meeting tomorrow at the Willard Hotel, will honor the three Brazilian explorers who spent nine and a half years following the projected route of the Pan-American highway through the jungles, mountains and swamps of South America.

At the luncheon, where the explorers—Leonidas Borges de Oliveira, Francisco Lopez de la Cruz and Mario Fava—will be cited, also will be S. W. White, of Dallas, Tex., who has been the interpreter for the trail blazers since their arrival in the United States. Ambassador Oswaldo Aranha, of Brazil, also has been invited.

Capper Calls Roosevelt Peace Plea 'Too Strong'

Cleveland, Nov. 11 (AP).—Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, in an interview here today, expressed fear that President Roosevelt's "demand for a quarantine of warring nations in his recent Chicago speech may draw the United States into present international conflicts."

"The President's statements at Chicago were too strong," Senator Capper declared. "The general objective of world peace was all right, but the speech left the way open for considerable doubt and uneasiness as to what the Government's policy might be. I'm of the opinion that Congress will be very strong for strict enforcement of the neutrality act."

Better Fish Stocking Needed, Bureau Finds

Universal Conscription Nye's Anti-War Plea

Oswego, N. Y., Nov. 11 (AP).—Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, today advocated universal conscription in time of war as an anti-war influence, in an Armistice Day address before students of Oswego Normal School.

Senator Nye, an advocate of United States neutrality in time of war, declared that "America is not invoking its neutrality policy fully in connection with the Sino-Japanese struggle because this would involve our losing foreign trade."

2 Girls Feared Bandit Victims In Md. Flight

D. C. Used Car Salesman Stripped and Robbed, Left on Road.

Police last night were attempting to determine the fate and the identities of two young girls who vanished yesterday somewhere between Washington and Baltimore after they had been picked up by two bandits in a stolen car, between one holdup and another. The bandits are believed to be escaped convicts.

Search for both the girls and the bandits began at sunrise yesterday, when John C. Gouldman, 25, an automobile salesman of 900 Crittenden street, told of having been held up and robbed of his car, his money, his jewelry and most of his clothing after being held prisoner by the bandits on a ride from Washington to a point on the Baltimore boulevard near Laurel.

Stopped for Girls.

Gouldman said he was forced out of his car after the bandits had compelled him to stop for the two girls, who were, he said, about 14 and 16 years old.

The girls, police said, were not with the bandits when they reached Baltimore and there held up Melvin Duley, 28, robbing him of $2. The license number of the bandit's car, reported by Duley, tallied with the one given by Gouldman, police said.

Descriptions of the men given by Gouldman, police said, resembled those of two men reported to have escaped from the Maryland State Prison Farm near Hagerstown.

The men walked into an automobile company in the 1400 block of Irving street Wednesday night, and asked Gouldman to show them a used car. He drove them to Sixteenth street and Park road, where one of them thrust a pistol in his back and demanded a ride to Baltimore.

"They weren't rough with me," Gouldman said, "but they showed me a handful of pistol cartridges and told me I knew what they were for so not to 'get funny.'"

Bragged About "Jobs."

He added his captors bragged about "jobs they had pulled."

"I was driving the car all the time until we came near Laurel, where they forced me to stop and pick up two young girls," the salesman said.

Here the bandits shoved Gouldman from the car after forcing him to remove most of his clothes.

"They even took my shoes, but returned them to me when they found out they wouldn't fit," he said.

A small quantity of money, a pair of glasses, a ring and watch, were taken from Gouldman.

The fugitives from the Hagerstown prison are Irving Limper, 33, serving a term of 20 years and John E. Carson, serving 12 years. Both men were sentenced for robberies in Baltimore.

Woman, 70, on Relief, Is Victim of Strangler

Chicago, Nov. 11 (A).—Neighbors found Mrs. Bertha De Meyer, 70, strangled in her room late today. Police said the woman had been murdered and possibly criminally assaulted.

The body was covered only with a coat. Around the neck was an electric light cord twisted tight with a curling iron. Acquaintances of the woman said she was a widow on relief.

Bandit Trio Holds Up Two Alexandria Men

Victim May Be Duckworth.

A man who leaped or fell into the Potomac River Wednesday is believed to have been Charles J. Duckworth, 59, 2909 North Kenmore street, Arlington, Va. A hat found near the Key Bridge has been identified as Duckworth's, police said.

Use of 'Exempt' Securities to Boost Surtax Weighed in House Body's Hunt for Revenue

tures should be checked and the budget balanced."

The House tax sub-committee meantime continued conferences with Treasury officials, with the announced intention of modifying both the undivided profits tax and the capital gains levy. A loss carry-over privilege in the capital gains tax, costing some $19,000,000 in revenue, already has been tentatively agreed to.

Yesterday the sub-committee considered possible repeal of the capital stock and excess profits taxes, which would mean a net loss of $140,000,000 to the Treasury, Vinson said. This would be a return to the original 1936 House revenue bill, which was changed in the Senate. The Senate imposed the undivided-profits tax on top of capital stock, excess profits and corporate income taxes.

Burden Held Exaggerated.

Vinson said he recognized hardships from the undivided profits levy, but declared "the clamor and furore as to the burden of the tax is greatly exaggerated." Exhibiting Treasury statistics, Vinson said that the average corporations which retain 30 per cent of their profits pay a normal and undivided profits tax of 10.6 to 19.5 per cent on net incomes ranging from $2,000 to $10,000,000.

"It does not mean that there aren't hardship cases," Vinson said. "It does not mean that we are not going to look for relief for hardship cases."

He said the committee also considered yesterday "increasing the tax on intercorporate dividends a little."

He pointed out that 85 per cent of intercorporate dividends are now exempt, and the remaining 15 per cent taxable.

Asked if he considered proposed repeal of the capital stock tax a business "relief" item, he said:

"I certainly think so. It is in the nature of a capital levy, and corporations must pay the tax in the past Secretary of the whether they have an income or not. If you make up for it by a tax on income, that would be fair."

The sub-committee chairman said the proposal to tax interest on tax-exempt securities was considered yesterday only from the standpoint of individual income, but treatment of tax-exempt securities held by corporations also will be discussed.

In the past, Serretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has favored a constitutional amendment as the necessary approach to taxing of tax-exempt holdings, but Vinson insisted yesterday that the legislative method considered was constitutional. He cited Senator Glass' report in 1919 in support of this view.

"A question has been raised concerning the right of the Federal Government under the Constitution to tax the income from State and municipal bonds, but there can be no doubt of the constitutionality of such an administrative provision," Glass, then Treasury Secretary, said in that report.

Glass said then that increasing investments in tax-exempt securities destroys a source of Government revenue, "tends to withdraw the capital of very rich men from the development of new enterprises" and stimulates "wasteful" activity by local governments by supplying them funds at easy rates.

Commetning on the Glass report, Vinson said "there are decisions of the courts that lead me to the conclusion that this method of taxing interest on tax-exempt securities would be upheld." But he said the sub-committee has taken no decision on the plan.

"A taxpayer has an ihcome of $10,000 that is taxable; he has a tax-exempt income of $10,000, making a total income of $20,000. Only the $10,000 of taxable income would be taxed, but the tax rate would be determined from the total income. Thus the higher surtax rate will apply to the $10,000 of taxable income. Instead of a surtax of 3 per cent or $300 on $10,000 income, the surtax would be 9.6 per cent on the $10,000, or a tax of $960."

Vinson said the Treasury will submit estimates Monday on how much revenue this plan would raise. The sub-committe has not decided whether to apply the plan to present outstanding issues, or to future security issues.

In a recent speech, Undersecretary of the Treasury Roswell Magill said that if all interest on State and municipal securities were taxed, it would yield $70,000,000 in revenue. If Federal Government securities were included, it would raise another $70,000,000. He estimated there are approximately $56,000,000,000 of tax-exempt securities of all types outstanding.

"Futile," Says Reed.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Reed (Republican), New York, said yesterday Secretary Morgenthau's proposal for broadening the income tax base would be "utterly futile" as long as the Administration continued its "senseless spending."

Morgenthau made the proposal in his speech in New York last night.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, said the suggestion merited "very serious consideration."

Reed, a member of the special House tax sub-committee challenged Administration statements that Government expenditures would be curtailed in the near future.

The blonde 31-year-old mother was convicted Saturday as the poison-slayer of Jacob Wagner, 78, one of four elderly acquaintances who died, the State contended, as a result of her ministrations.

Growth of Cancer Halted by Injection Of Sugar and Iron

New York, Nov. 11 (A).—Discovery that hypodermics of sugar and iron stop cancer growth during treatment in most cases in animals was announced today in Science, journal of the American Association for the advancement of science.

The sugar-iron medicine is one in a growing list of substances with power to retard cancer.

The experiments were reported by Richard M. Brickner of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University and of the Neurological Institute, New York City, and Royal E. Grant, of the institute.

Iron was selected for the cancer attack because of its effects in other experiments on growth. Sugar was added to the iron to induce the cancer to take up larger quantities of the metal. The combination was in the form of ferric gluconate.

30 Million Visited Parks.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Forest Service reported yesterday 30,801,938 recreationists visited the Nation's 157 national forests during the 1937 fiscal year. This was an increase of 29 per cent over 1936.

Housebreaking, Larceny Lead Reformatory List

Housebreaking and larceny led in offenses for which prisoners were incarcerated in the District Reformatory in October, Col. W. L. Peak, superintendent of penal institutions, reported yesterday.

The reformatory admitted 49 convicted persons during the month, bringing the total population to 1,522. Ten of these had been convicted of housebreaking or larceny, seven of robbery.

Bandit Auto Escapes Police in Gun Fight

Andrew J. Carrington, Prince Georges County policeman, fired there times at a fleeing bandit car on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard yesterday.

The chase began at Riverdale, Md., where Carrigan and another officer, Earle J. Huber, investigated a storebreaking report. The policemen sighted the car as it sped away from the store. They continued the chase to the District line, but the car got away.

Asked to Take Dog for Ride, Man Shoots Self

Chauffeur Never Objected Before, Retired D. C. Army Officer Says.

Henri A. Oudot, 36, Belgian chauffeur for Maj. Gist Blair for the past four years, shot and seriously wounded himself late yesterday at the Blair home at 1651 Pennsylvania avenue after he had been asked to take his employer's dog for a ride.

Servants who knew Oudot said he had been nervous for some time and apparently was brooding as he waited for a cable from Belgium for verification that his wife and 3-year-old daughter had set sail for this country. Only last week he had sent a cablegram to his family and had received no answer, the servants said.

Oudot came to the employ of Maj. Blair about four years ago from the Egyptian Minister. Shortly thereafter he married the maid of the then Belgian Ambassador's wife. The child was born here in Washington. The wife and child returned to Belgium and Oudot has not seen them since.

Physicians at Emergency Hospital, where Oudot was taken, said he had been severely wounded in the chest. Arriving there a short time later Maj. Blair arranged for his employe to have the use of an oxygen tent in an effort to save his life. Oudot has an even chance to recover, the doctors said.

Asked to Take Dog Riding.

The shooting occurred after Esther S. Ekberg, the Blair maid, had told Oudot that he must take Rex, the family's pet police dog, for daily rides as part of his job, police were told.

He arose from the table in the servants' dining room, where he had been talking to the maid, and went to his room, where he took a .32-calber reviolver, police were told, and shot himself.

Oudot then walked calmly back to the servants' quarters, where he collapsed into the arms of the French chef, Marcel Berthault. At first Berthault thought Oudot was joking, but when he examined him he called first aid.

Never Objected Before.

"He had driven me for four years, and always seemed to be a very good man," said Maj. Blair, who retired from the Army shortly after the World War. Maj. Blair added he was at a loss to explain his chauffeur's action.

"Previously he had offered no objection to taking Rex driving. In fact, we had the dog out for a ride yesterday afternoon, and he sat in the front seat with Mr. Oudot."

He had been trying to help Oudot get his wife and their child in Belgium on the immigration quota to enter the United States, asserted Maj. Blair.

Waitress Attacker Jailed.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 11.—For striking a waitress on the head in his beer parlor, Homer Hurst, formerly of Maken, near Salem, today began a jail sentence of one year here, and must pay a fine of $100 and court costs.

Judge the Future by the Past:
Real Estate Is a Sound Investment

Real estate value is largely dependent on population growth, and the charts above, showing the growth of both the District and of Metropolitan Washington, tell instantly why real estate values have increased here and will continue to increase. The growth of a nation's capital city cannot be stopped; Washington real estate offers a prudent and profitable investment.

Look on your purchase of a home as an investment as well as a means of providing shelter for your family. You will find the widest selection of desirable homes offered in the real estate section of The Washington Post, which carries more real estate display advertising than any other newspaper in America. U. D. C. Official Glad of Error Slurring Davis

Says Her 'Slip' Did More Than 30 Yrs. Work to Make Him Known.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Nov. 11.—Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, of Macon, Ga., new president general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, said today that a simple mistake did more than 30 years of labor to place her "correct estimate" of Jefferson Davis before the country.

Mrs. Lamar, in an address before the Georgia U. D. C. at Macon in October, closed an address with this slip-of-the-tongue peroration:

"Let the world know the wisdom, the kindness, and the justice of the great and only President of the Confederate States of America—Abraham Lincoln."

Hue and Cry Raised.

Georgia newspapers and the Associated Press spread the story, and news magazines followed suit.

In a few days, Mrs. Lamar decided "it was quite remarkable that after spending 30 years and more trying to get the correct estimate of Mr. Davis across the Mason and Dixon Line, it was finally accomplished because of a slip of the tongue."

The creator of "Gone With the Wind" agreed in a letter to Mrs. Lamar, "It does seem strange that because of the juxtaposition of Lincoln's name with Davis' record, you received a 'national coverage' when, if you had said Jefferson Davis, as you intended, the news coverage would have been a Southern one. The workings of the press are strange, indeed."

A Good U. D. C. Husband.

Mrs. Lamar, historian general of the U. D. C. for the past three years, was elected president today to succeed Mrs. John L. Woodbury, of Louisville, Ky. Thereupon, Husband Lamar sent a congratulatory telegram promising to be "a good U. D. C. husband."

The new president general said she meant to keep at the job of giving Confederacy President Davis a standing in the Nation's eye with such warriors as Lee, Jackson and "Jeb" Stuart.

Retail Unit Seeks To Aid Consumer

Resolutions aimed at improving consumer knowledge of merchandise sold in retail stores were adopted Wednesday in the final session of a two-day meeting of the Retailers' National Council, a federation of ten national retail trade associations.

"The Council," one of the resolutions declared, "voices the principle that retailers should endorse and employ all practicable means of supplying such information, but avoiding unnecessary additional costs to the consumer.

Council officers were re-elected. Herbert F. Sheets is president; Gerald Grosner, vice president; Herbert Rich, treasurer; Harold R. Young, secretary, and Louis Rothschild, assistant secretary.

Y.M.C.A. to Hold Week Of Prayers for Youth

A week of prayer for the youth of the world will be observed by Young Men's Christian Associations everywhere, beginning Sunday.

The associations throughout the world have been asked to join in the observance, an annual custom since 1865, by the World's Alliance of Y. M. C. A.'s, with headquarters in Geneva.

Churches and adult Bible classes of this city have been asked to participate. Details have been mailed to officials of the local "Y" by M. O. Chance, chairman of the Religious Work Committee of the "Y."

Contract Bridge

Play for the Error.

The mechanically perfect player rarely gets as much out of his cards as the one who capitalizes human fallibility. On many hands the chance of making the desired number of tricks against perfect defense is remote. In any game but a contest between masters there is always a fair chance that a defender may slip. Note South's play for the error in today's hand.

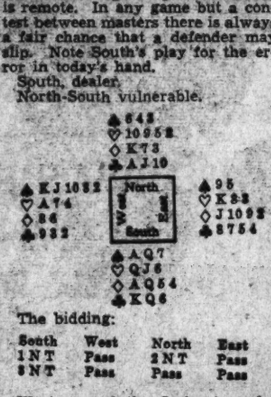
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 N T	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the Jack of spades and South won with the Queen. It did not take declarer very long to determine that the contract was makable without further ado if the six outstanding diamonds were divided 3-3. If that were the case, however, he would be able to capitalize it later on. It was more important at the moment to provide another possible line of play.

South, therefore, led a diamond to the King and returned a low heart form the dummy. Just as South had hoped, West made a mistake. He woodenly played a low heart, and South's Queen knocked out West's Ace. West continued the spades and South won the third round of the suit.

Now the time had come to try out the diamonds. When they failed to break, South merely knocked out the King of hearts. West's spades were established, but he could not obtain the lead to run them.

Note the difference produced by a correct play at trick three. Had West properly put up the King of hearts he would have held the trick. A spare return would enable West to establish his suit while he still had the Ace of hearts for later entry. The diamonds not breaking, South would have had no play for his contract without establishing a heart trick. West, therefore, would have regained the lead with the Ace of hearts, to run the setting tricks.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Rail Asks I. C. C. For Lease Grant

By the Associated Press.

Trustees of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co., applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission Wednesday for authority to lease the Chicago, Rock Island & Gulf Railway during the period the Rock Island & Pacific is in bankruptcy.

The proposed lease has been approved by a Chicago Federal court. Rental to be paid would equal the net operating income of the Gulf carrier.

U. S. Finds Income 'Median' Is $1,500

More than half of the "representative" families in 19 small cities live on less than $1,500 a year, the Department of Agriculture Home Economics Bureau last night said in reporting a survey of 14,400 families in 1935-36.

The cities were "scientifically selected as representative," the bureau said. It added:

"For two cities of industrial New England the median income was $1,347, half the families getting more, half less; for seven Central West cities, $1,164; for four Plains and Rocky Mountain cities, $1,419; for four Pacific Northwest cities, $1,555, and for two Southeastern cities, $1,233 for native white families and $419 for Negro families."

Expatriated Germans' Art Works to Be Shown

Martin Lowitz's collection of about 150 art pieces of expatriate Germans will arrive at the Jewish Community Center Sunday. They will be on exhibition for four days.

The collection includes about 150 oils, etchings, woodcuts, lithographs, drawings, engravings and rare prints, all the work of artists scattered throughout the world who had had to leave Germany because of political or religious beliefs.

MacDonald's Kin Decline Burial In Westminster

London, Nov. 11 (AP).—Ramsay MacDonald's family today declined an offer that he be buried in historic Westminster Abbey.

The subdean of the abbey said the family wished burial to take place in MacDonald's native Lossiemouth. A memorial service will be held at the abbey. MacDonald, who rose from poverty to become three times premier of Britain, died Tuesday.

Refusals of abbey burials have been rare in British history.

Taxi Lunges Backward, Five Persons Injured

New York, Nov. 11 (AP).—Edward Spanner's taxicab lunged backward instead of ahead at a traffic light in crowded Times Square this afternoon. Net result:

Three women went to the hospital with fractured legs.

An ambulance en route to the scene collided with a truck, injuring a doctor and the driver.

Ten persons were knocked down during the taxi's maneuvers through traffic.

Triple Murder, Suicide Follows Cut in Income

Coroner Jack Garibaldi said Kicha Mishima, 60, strangled his wife, Hazuye, 45; a daughter, Mizuno, 8, and a son, Itsumo, 6, with neckties, and then hanged himself. A surviving daughter, Zume, told the coroner her father had been brooding over lowered grape prices.

Quake on West Coast.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

An animal who can't gossip, can't talk, can't make speeches and can't even vote is as influential in Washington's social life as any clique in the Capital.

This animal, consequently, is also influential in politics, matters of Government and affairs of state—though not quite so influential since the second coming of Roosevelt as in former regimes.

I mean the horse, which enjoys more power and prestige in Capital life than its fine feathered friend, the eagle, that Federal bird which perches so grandiosely everywhere in town.

"——when the horse whinneys."

When the thoroughbred neighs, the eagle screams in vain . . . For the eagle, poor bird, has never been domesticated, saddled and bridled or harnessed to pull its weight as a social adjunct.

Don't get the erroneous impression that horses go to cocktail parties or formal dinners, or that they take part in conferences, or that they lurk in the corridors outside the Senate.

The horse is too smart and too subtle for such crude direct action . . . It munches its oats aloofly in the Virginia and Maryland stables which hem in the District of Columbia like an iron ring of hussar outposts.

Instead, the horse keeps in the background, like a boss in the backroom of a saloon, and operates through the effulgent horsemen and horsewomen of the Washington region—the owners of stables, the riding clubs, the cavalry and the Fort Myer crowds, the horse show and hunt club coteries, the entire horsey set of the country gentry, the Maryland and Virginia aristocracy.

These aristocrats are the purest survivor in a direct line of the colonial aristocrats who fought in the War of the Revolution and who founded the Republic . . . It is not altogether unfitting for them to form an influential bloc—though more of their time has often been devoted to good horses, good women and good whisky than to good government.

"——he flees to a sunlamp."

These gentlefolk add quite a horsey flavor to Washington society . . . in their ingenuous way, they give Virginia and Maryland an influence on what goes on in Washington quite out of proportion to their representation in Congress or in the Bureaux. Even when they are coupon clippers or dividend chappies they have a slight rural, agricultural bias.

* * * *

It's natural, of course, that mere geographical nearness should help Maryland and Virginia, which surround the Capital, to gain an inordinate leverage on Washington officialdom . . . If the Capital were in California, it would be the movie people and the orange growers; if it were in Michigan, the motor barons.

* * * *

* * * *

Exposed to their outdoorishness, their charm and their English country squire manner of being the backbone of the country, an official or a Congressman from the adobe or factory frontiers has only two choices.

He can go out and get a sunlamp treatment and try to combat their a g e d-in-the-leather aristocratic virility with plebeian defiance.

Standard Lights For Traffic Asked

Standard arrangement of lights in traffic signals to assist drivers who are color blind was urged Wednesday night by Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District of Columbia A. A. A., at a meeting of the Mohican Hills Citizens Association, in the home of Roy E. Miller.

Cleveland said the American Automobile Association hoped to obtain standardization of all traffic signals so that color-blind drivers could depend for direction on the position of the light, rather than the color. Red lights would be placed at the top, amber in the middle, and green at the bottom, Cleveland explained.

His discussion of traffic safety was illustrated with a series of films, demonstrating major causes of motor accidents, furnished by the A. A. A.

Meeting of Residents Called To Protest Carfare Boost

Member of P. U. C. Will Be Asked to Defend Board Increase.

Thirteen men and women, most of them identified with civic, labor or professional groups, voted last night to sponsor a meeting to protest the recent car fare increase.

The sponsoring group met last night at 523 Seventeenth street northwest, at the invitation of Sidney Katz, chairman of the Civic Affairs Committee of the United Federal Workers of America. The meeting will be held November 23 in the District Building.

It was announced that Clayton Powell, of the Federation of Citizens, and William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, will be asked to participate in the protest, and that a member of the Public Utilities Commission will be invited to defend the action of that body in granting the increase.

A sub-committee was appointed to enlist leaders of other organizations among the sponsors.

The sponsoring committee as organized last night includes: Katz, R. T. Haase and Miss Edna O. Anderson, of the United Federal Workers of America; Mrs. Marie F. Maddox and George H. Brown, of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association; Charles A. Franklin, of the citizens committee for progressive action; Herbert Fuchs, committee on social legislation of the Washington Chapter of the National Lawyers' Guild; Mrs. Vera M. Barnes, Washington Highlands Citizens' Association; Mrs. Y. B. Lesse, Samuel Lipkowitz and Bernard Stern, of the National Labor Relations Board office; J. H. Krug, of the Rural Electrification Administration, and J. T. Farnum, of the Social Security Board office. These explained, however, that they were serving as individuals, since their organizations have taken no formal action on the increase.

Token Boost Protested.

Protesting the recently effected street car token rate of six for 50 cents, the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Associtaion last night demanded that the local transit situation be investigated by a Congressional committee.

The association felt that the sale of six tokens at one time is unfair to the poor man. It went on record as favoring a three-for-25 rate.

In answer to a previous request of the association, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, principal speaker at the meeting, assured the members that a "demand" traffic light would be installed on Connecticut avenue at the entrance to the Zoo within the next year. Such a light would enable pedestrians to cross safely by pushing a button and stopping traffic.

Van Duzer also outlined plans for the proposed Connecticut avenue tunnel underneath Dupont Circle. A model of the plans will be ready for exhibition in about a week, he said.

Group Names Officers.

At the meeting of the Congress Heights Citizens Association, E. J. Read was re-elected president. Other officers elected are Benson Taylor, first vice president; Earl Cooper, second vice president; Mrs. Alma Allen, financial secretary; Mrs. Edna Dulin, secretary, and Miss Catherine Young, treasurer.

Taylor and Cooper were named delegates to the Federation of Citizens' Associations, and Read, Mrs. Dulin and Mrs. Anna Gannon, delegates to the Southeast Council. Ira Marine was elected a trustee.

Last of Long-Seat Trolley Cars Sold

The last of the Capital Transit Co.'s longitudinal seat street cars, some of which were more than 40 years old, have been sold for scrap to a Baltimore firm, the company disclosed yesterday.

Thirty-one of these cars and one center-entrance trolley were sold for $3,750, or about $117 a car. They originally cost $165,000. Last August the company sold 21 similar cars for $3,300.

During the present year the transit company has retired 75 cars, it was said, and 32 of the older type buses. It has recently ordered 12 new buses at a cost of $130,000. They will be put in operation early in the holiday season.

Retirement of the longitudinal seat cars, it was said was made possible by the purchase of 45 new stream-lined cars at a cost of $16,000 each.

Gun for D. C. Felon Lands Man in Jail

Allen K. Jones, 33, a Louisville, Ky., attorney, was convicted in Federal court in Louisville Wednesday on a charge of smuggling a gun to Sherman T. Callaway, 28, of Washington, while Callaway was being held in the county jail in Louisville, the Associated Press reported.

Callaway, according to Federal authorities at Louisville, is a confessed mail robber, and on three occasions has attempted to break jail. He was recently sentenced to a 15-year term on a charge of conspiracy, the Associated Press reported.

Jones was given a three-year sentence yesterday but was released on $5,000 bond pending preparation of a plea for new trial. He told the court he hoped he would "not live an instant longer if what I told is not the truth."

Chest Army Plans Fun at Day's Session

Workers Sense Victory as Optimistic Carnival Is Arranged.

Luncheon Meeting to Be Turned Over to Publicity Group.

Community Chest workers, sensing victory in the tenth annual campaign for funds, will give way to their optimism today in a carnival luncheon meeting in the Willard Hotel, it was announced at the campaign headquarters last night.

The meeting, in which songs and rapid-fire comment will play a large part, has been turned over to the publicity unit, the first time a non-soliciting group in the Chest organization has been given such an honor. Earl A. Nash has been selected as presiding officer by Joseph D. Kauman, chairman of the unit, and Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice chairman.

A special gavel for the occasion has been purchased for Nash by two workers in the unit, Avis Kline and Betty O'Brien, and the entire group has participated in preparation of a program. The dining room will be decorated with flags, and a song leader has been engaged to lead workers in parodies on popular songs.

Pastor to Say Prayer.

Some of the regular features of normal report meetings, of which today's will be the last for the week, will be retained. Dr. J. Harold Mumper, pastor of the Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, will deliver the invocation, and Clarence Phelps Dodge, Community Chest president, will call the session to order before turning it over to Nash.

Publishers of the five Washington daily newspapers have been invited to sit at the head table. Frederick M. Bradley will report for the special assignment unit, Dr. Homer K. Butler for the metropolitan unit, Frederick P. H. Siddons for the special assignments unit, T. Stanley Holland, vice chairman, for the suburban unit, and Frank Sirgfeld, vice chairman, for the governmental unit.

Workers in all units yesterday worked through the partial Armistice holiday to bring in the $2,059,000 needed to meet the needs of those served by the 69 agencies of the Chest. Reports reaching headquarters yesterday indicated several of the suburban teams have been highly successful.

Calls Armistice Impossible.

"While the world is celebrating Armistice Day we must remember that there is no armistice in the battle which the agencies affiliated with the Community Chest are waging on behalf of the less fortunate people in Washington," Newbold Noyes, a former campaign chairman and Chest president, last night told a radio audience over Station WMAL.

Pennies, nickels and dimes saved during the fall by 250 members of the Powell Boys Club, of the Powell School, Hiatt place and Lamont street northwest, will be turned over to the Chest tonight as a contribution to boys' clubs at a special ceremony.

Ignorance, Prudery, Lack of Funds Called Foes in Disease War.

Praising George Washington students for their initiation of a University campaign against syphilis, a distinguished panel of physicians and social hygiene workers last night carried to an audience of 250 the message that ignorance, prudery and lack of financial support are the chief enemies of a comprehensive program for venereal disease control.

Dr. Raymond A. Vonderlehr, assistant U. S. Surgeon General and director of the venereal disease division of the Public Health Service, told the undergraduate meeting in Stockton Hall, "we will have come a long way in our program if we can bring syphilis out in the open and consider it as a communicable disease."

Dr. Vonderlehr said 80 per cent of patients who apply for treatment within the first year after infection are cured.

Describing the veneral disease problem in the District, Dr. Melvin F. Isinger, director of Washington public health education, stated that the District stood second highest among all the States in its death rate from syphilis. Dr. Isinger estimated that there were 30,000 cases of syphilis in Washington.

Dr. H. T. Hazen, profesor of dermatology at Howard University, asserted Government assistance would be necessary for any program of syphilis control among underprivileged sections of the population. "We must have available free treatment, good treatment and plenty of it."

G. W. Beauties Rehearse for Rally Tonight

A dozen George Washington University beauties, one of whom will be awarded the title of university sweetheart, held their final rehearsal last night for the pep rally at the Capitol Theater that will open the university's annual homecoming celebration tonight.

The sweetheart, to be chosen by popular vote among the 12, will be crowned in the culminating feature of the Capitol Theater rally. Her name will be kept secret until the final moment, although voting Wednesday and approximately 1,500 ballots have been tabulated.

Before the announcement, all twelve of those in running for the honor will appear in group dances at the rally, which will also be featured with songs, cheers and a skit titled "I'd Rather Be Right Than Rochelle." William R. Rochelle is president of the university student body.

Speakers will be Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, university president, and the coaches of both George Washington and the team it meets tomorrow afternoon at Griffith Stadium, North Dakota State.

The girl elected campus sweetheart will occupy a special box at the football game and will lead the grand march at the ball at the Willard Hotel tomorrow night. In addition she will be given a free trip to Texas next spring to attend the annual University of Texas "roundup."

The two days of the homecoming festivities will be marked on the campus by gayly decorated recitation and residence halls, which will be floodlighted at nightfall. Fraternities will hold open house for alumni and active members tonight, while at 8 p. m. the sororities will present a style show at the Student Club.

Woman's Death Makes Traffic Toll 90 Here

Washington's ninetieth traffic death was reported to police yesterday when it was learned that Mrs. Mary Davis, 87, 1221 Massachusetts avenue northwest, died Wednesday of injuries received October 18.

At the time of the accident, which occurred at Thirteenth and Massachusetts avenue northwest, Mrs. Davis was taken to Emergency Hospital and treated for a fractured pelvis. She was later allowed to return home, where she died.

Miss Mary Buscher, 20, 501 Ninth street northeast, was severely injured yesterday when she lost control of her car while trying to keep her dog from jumping out of the automobile at Kenilworth street and Lane place northeast.

Albert P. McDonald, 20, who gave his address as 1102 L street northwest, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving by Ninth Precinct police last night after, police said, his auto struck Philip Moore, 16, of Hyattsville, Md., on the New York avenue bridge.

Women's Pay In Part-Time Jobs Is Fixed

Minimum of $13 Set for Learners in Retail Trade.

District Board Defines Work Week as 40 to 48 Hours.

Minimum wages for women employes in the retail trade who work less than a 40-hour week or are learners were adopted yesterday by the District Minimum Wage Board.

The rate fixed for part-time workers is 40 cents an hour providing the employe does not work 40 hours a week. In adopting this rate, the board defined the "standard work week" as between 40 and 48 hours. The basic minimum wage, previously adopted, is $17 for a week's work, whether it be 40 or 48 hours.

Rate Set for Learners.

Women learners in the retail trade the board decided, must be paid $13 a week during the first six months service and $15 during the following six months. After the first year's apprenticeship, the employe must be paid $17 or more.

To forestall evasion of the $17 basic wage, the board ruled that learners may not comprise more than 10 per cent of the women employed in any retail house.

Learners, the board said, must obtain certificates from the wage board before they may accept less than the $17 minimum weekly pay.

The wage scales for part-time workers and learners were recommended by the retail wage conference, which had previously proposed the $17 wage.

This afternoon the wage board will inaugurate its investigation of the wages paid women and minors in the hotel and restaurant industries. A mass meeting of all interested parties will be held at 3 o'clock in the board room of the District Building.

Asked to Name Candidates.

Waitresses and other women workers in the industry will be asked to nominate nine candidates from whom the board will select three to sit at the conference.

The former minimum wage fixed for this class of workers prior to the invalidating of the minimum wage law was $16.50 a week with deductions limited to $2 a week for lodging and 30 cents a meal for board.

'Conquest' Is Powerful Play Of Great Love

By Nelson B. Bell.

"CONQUEST," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Helen Jerome's dramatization of the novel by Waclaw Gasiorowski's novel, adapted to the screen by Samuel Hoffenstein, Salka Viertel and S. N. Behrman, co-starring Greta Garbo and Charles Boyer, with Reginald Owen, Alan Marshal, Henry Stephenson, Leif Erikson, Dame May Whitty, Mme. Marie Ouspenskaya, Claude Gillingwater, George Houston, George Givot, Bodil Rosing, Scotty Beckett and an ensemble of thousands. Directed by Clarence Brown. Previewed Saturday afternoon, November 6. At Loew's Palace Theater.

Produced on the mammoth scale of sumptuous splendor demanded by its historical significance and the importance of its pivotal characters, "Conquest" primarily is a compelling and moving love story.

It has as its leading figure the Countess Marie Walewska, born in poverty, but when first revealed upon the screen the youthful wife of a Polish aristocrat who is more often mistaken for her grandfather than her husband. In her breast burns an enormous patriotic zeal for the freedom of her people, threatened with national extinction by a belligerent and an acquisitive Russia.

The towering figure in the play, of course, is Napoleon, conqueror of most of Europe with the dream of a confederation of European states and the end of war taking form in his mind as a fulfillment of personal ambition and a solution of all of Europe's political ills.

An Emperor Woos.

These two first meet clandestinely when the Countess Marie seeks out Napoleon on his entry into Poland, to make an anonymous plea for the liberation of her country from the national disintegration that is threatened. They meet next at the State ball in the emperor's honor and the first great love of his life is kindled in the imperial heart. He is discreetly, but emphatically repulsed, but in this incident lies the genesis of the romantic developments that follow—a persistent and tenacious wooing by Bonaparte and a final surrender of the beautiful Walewska, as the underlying motives of a seemingly ruthless tyrant are understood and accepted as the benign plans of a world savior. Divorced by her outraged husband, Countess Marie becomes the inspiration of Napoleon's dream of empire—until Elba, Waterloo and St. Helena write a period to the life and career of the indomitable figure whose final judgment was less sound than hers.

The progress of this intimate recital of a deep and tender attachment is traced against authentic historical backgrounds. Its major movement is largely fictional, but fiction contrived in so skillful a manner as never to violate the spirit of the Napoleonic era or the character and moods of the harassed principals it so vitally concerns. Speeches are put into Napoleon's mouth that he never spoke, but they are speeches that he might easily have made without sacrifice of any of the Bonaparte tradition. Of these the "defeat speech" is perhaps the most eminent example. Then there are the shrewdly fashioned scenes in which Napoleon is worsted in a whimsical duel of words by the aged Countess Pelagia, senile in mind as well as body; the meeting of Marie with Napoleon's mother and the priceless episode of the bedside prayer of Master Alexandre Walewska, who does not know the imperial identity of a father ignorant of the lad's existence too long.

Romantic Highlights.

These are highlights in a personal rather than an historical romance and, because this is so, it is wholly fitting that the march back from Moscow, Waterloo and other of the decisive events in Napoleon's life should be reduced to mere suggestions of the tricks of fate and the influences that turned back the floodtide of his greatness.

The picture is marked by an unbroken succession of spectacular scenes that combine majestic beauty with imposing magnitude. It is magnificently photographed and acted with unerring taste and impressive power.

In the role of the Countess Walewska, Greta Garbo is by turns gay, courageous and disillusioned. It is difficult to detect a false note in on. of the most artistic and most effective of the many notable impersonations she has brought to the screen. Her beauty is at times breath-taking and her anguish is no less eloquently reflected in her appearance as well as her words. Less to be anticipated is the astonishingly realistic portrait of Napoleon contributed to this admirable costellar alliance by Charles Boyer. Endowed with the natural advatage of a close personal resemblance to the Little Corsican, he brings an equal impressiveness to the realization of the part's dramatic possibilities which fits well upon his physical contures. It is Boyer's greatest piece of work upon the American screen.

There are many in the supporting cast who add to "Conquest's" rounded excellence under the thoughtful and more than competent direction of Clarence Brown. These embrace such recognized artists as Reginald Owen, as Talleyrand; Alan Marshal and Leif Erikson, among the younger players; Mme. Maria Ouspenskaya, as the inimitable Countess Pelagia; Dame May Whitty, as Napoleon's mother; Scotty Beckett, as Alexandre, the fatherless son, and Claude Gillingwater, a faithful servitor. Henry Stephenson is a believable Count Walewska in the film's furious early scenes. There are many others who perform their tasks in flawless fashion.

Robert Benchley's sardonic short-reel of "A Night at the Movies" and the "Events of the Day" supplement a feature that takes rank among the superlative achievements of the cinema.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Message From the President Commends Work Among Underprivileged Children; Club Reveals Its Benefactions; Early Opening Today at Capitol; About the Theater Guild; Former Washington Producer Plans Visit; Notes of the Theater and Its People.

PRESIDENTIAL greetings in anticipation of the annual dinner and dance to be given by the Variety Club of Washington, Tent No. 11, in the Willard Hotel this month have been received by Chief Barker Barron—president to you—of the showmen's organization.

BELL.

In the White House message, President Roosevelt had this to say: "I send hearty felicitations and cordial good wishes for the annual frolic of the Washington Club, No. 11, of Variety. Your purpose in directing your efforts to alleviation of distress among handicapped children is most praiseworthy and I trust as a result of your undertaking that life will be made brighter and happier for these little sufferers."

This expression of cordial good will on the part of the President will be incorporated in the souvenir program to be distributed to guests at the banquet on the night of Saturday, November 20, for which this column had the honor of writing the foreword.

In this connection, as the term of the incumbent welfare committee of the Variety Club draws to a close it has made known the benefactions that have been made under its direction in the name of Variety. The most important event on the club's calendar, and the one entailing the most intensive effort, was the charity boxing card, sponsored jointly by the Variety Club and The Washington Post, held in Griffith Stadium last July. This event grossed $18,000 with Champion Freddie Miller and Charles "Hobo" Williams as the featured leather-pushers. The net profit to the club was $3,400. Of this sum, $2,600 was contributed to Camp Good Will (nonsectarian) to provide two weeks' summer outing for 90 underprivileged children and 25 mothers. One hundred dollars was donated to the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club; $160 toward tubercular relief for juveniles. Numerous contributions, ranging from $10 to $50, have been made to persons in distress and a number of parties for shut-ins were given last winter. In response to urgent appeals for help in providing free lunches for underfed school children, $250 was contributed. At a recent meeting of the board of governors, the Welfare Committee was authorized to purchase a truck completely equipped with new sound motion picture equipment for use in providing film entertainment for the shut-ins this season.

Both the membership of Variety and the residents of the National Capital have every reason to be proud of this record of helpfulness and generosity.

Martha Eggert, brilliant young singing star of The Unfinished Symphony," seen many months ago on a Washington screen, has the leading role in "Casta Diva," the new Italian operatic film spectacle, which will be presented for two performances only at the Rialto Theater on Sunday.

"Casta Diva" concerns the life of the celebrated composer, Bellini, and is featured by scenes from the opera "Norma." Important musical episodes are contributed by the chorus and orchestra of the world-famous La Scala, in Milan.

Sunday's performances will be at 2 and 4:30 p. m.

Effective today only, the doors at Loew's Capitol Theater will be opened to the public on an early schedule. The box-office will open for the sale of tickets at 10:30 a. m., instead of the customary 10:45 and the first screening of "Stand-In" will begin at 10:45. "Stand-In" is the new satirical comedy aimed at the foibles of Hollywood and the indiscriminate imposts placed upon the intricate business of picture production by the money moguls of Wall Street. Leslie Howard and Joan Blondell are cast in the costellar roles, and, believe it or not, Mr. Howard is as competent a comedian as he is classic actor. Among other things, the austere Mr. Howard is subjected to the impact of a squshy tomato accurately aimed at his nose, thus placing himself in the same artistic category as Gladys Swarthout, who recently underwent a similarly broadening experience.

It seems worthy of note that "The Awful Truth," by going into another week as chief attraction on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning today, enters the charmed list of the long-run champions in the Capital. This will make the fourth consecutive week for this lively subject in the downtown area—one at the Earle and three at the Met.

During the three weeks ended last night, "The Awful Truth" has played to capacity crowds at virtually every performance after the morning's opening. Irene Dunne and Cary Grant are the stars. By the deftness of their work and its high good humor, these two have attracted many patrons back for a second and third viewing and a few have made even better scores than that. If the picture doesn't look out, it will turn out to be a hit!

This desk is indebted to Covici-Friede, publishers, for a bound volume of Ben Hecht's new play of "To Quito and Back, produced this year by the Theater Guild with Leslie Banks and Sylvia Sidney in the principal roles. Having just yanked the wrapping off the gift, "Quito," of course, has not as yet been read beyond the title page. Since there has been so much diverse critical discussion of this play, however, it will be with a great deal of interest—and soon.

The Guild, incidentally, is having a season that recalls its earlier days when experimental drama occupied as much of its time as the purely commercial product of the playwrights.

Already "Amphitryon 38," costarring Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, has established itself as a New York success and the same happy future is predicted for "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle," with Ethel Barrymore and Dudley Digges, coming to the National Monday night. This new Sidney

Pirate Ancestor Gives Him Laugh

Frank Morgan has received a letter that is getting a lot of chuckles out of the cast of "A Matter of Pride." It is from a firm whose business it is to tear family trees limb from limb and establish a distinguished ancestry.

"We have reasons to believe," said the letter, "that you are descended from Sir Henry Morgan, the pirate, who was knighted for his services to England on the Spanish Main. Our research fee is £50 if you wish to look further into the matter.

THOSE "INFLUENTIAL PEOPLE" who induced A. F. of L's president, Green, to issue that statement inviting the Windsors to come here first approached John L. Lewis, who didn't oppose the idea. But Lewis made the mistake of asking the advice of the State Department and was advised to mind his own business . . . Mrs. Jim Farley last night said she'd never go to see "I'd Rather Be Right," because "I won't waste my time going to see my friends ridiculed—my friends who are trying to help the country" . . . ELIA KAZAN, who portrays the manager-gangster role in Odets' "Golden Boy," just returned from Hollywood, where he was to have been employed by Walter Wanger. Kazan was turned over to Hal Horne, the production boss, who advised first a change of name. "I know you're Armenian," Horne stated, "but too many people will mispronounce 'Elia Kazan.' Let's look in the phone book" . . . After five minutes' search Horne selected "Elliott" as the first name. The next day he selected "Cezanne" as the second name . . . "But Cezanna is the name of a famous artist," Kazan protested . . . "Really?" Horne replied. "Well, don't worry about it. After you make one or two pictures, they'll never know he existed!"

Dietrich Acts as Guide in Vienna

She met Dr. Eris Locke, business manager on the Dietrich-Ernst Lubitsch film, "Angel," in Vienna, where he had been sent to obtain background pictures for Miss Colbert's next film, "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," which will also be directed by Lubitsch.

Miss Dietrich acted as Dr. Locke's guide for a day to familiarize him with certain views that he subsequently had his camera crew photograph and ship back to Paramount's Hollywood studio. Locke told of the meeting in a letter to Lubitsch.

Comic Quartet Compound Fun In Keith Film

"MERRY-GO-ROUND OF 1938," Universal picturization of a story by Monte Brice and Henry Myers; adapted to the screen by Dorian Otsos and Monte Brice, featuring Bert Lahr, Jimmy Savo, Billy House and Mischa Auer, with Alice Brady, Louise Fazenda, Joy Hodges, John King, Barbara Read and Dave Apollon and his orchestra. Directed by Irving Cummings. Reviewed Thursday afternoon at RKO-Keith's Theater.

It is a comedy with music, in a slightly "different" vein, that is disclosed in this screen play aimed at deep-seated laughs.

Instead of being the customary ornate celluloid revue, "Merry-Go-Round of 1938" confines itself to the relation of a reasonably direct and consistently amusing story of four old-time vaudevillians who attempt to stave off starvation while fostering the professional and romantic career of a waif of the theater who has been orphaned by a tragic accident on the stage. This slightly lugubrious opening of the story leads later to high hilarity in which a quartet of the theater's foremost funsters run riot.

The piece is cleverly devised to permit the introduction of songs and specialties without impeding the movement of the story. In fact, they augment it. These include comedy bits with which Washington already is familiar, together with many that are fresh and thoroughly laughable. Among the former are Bert Lahr's woodchopper's song, lifted bodily from "The Show Is On," and Jimmy Savo's famous pantomimic rendition of that ominous classic, "River Stay Away From My Door." Among the newer comedy creations are Mischa Auer's levitation stunt, as the great Swami introduced into a rich dowager's home as part of a gigantic hoax, and Billy House's female impersonation as a high-born member of the British aristocracy.

Miss Hodges Sings.

Interlarded among these major comic sequences are many minor bits of nonsense and speedy speeches that moved yesterday's audience to gales of laughter and occasional bursts of applause—not mentioning what happened to seams and buttons. Also interspersed through the action are songs well sung by Joy Hodges, the heroine of the goings-on, and a brief interval devoted to Dave Apollon and his Filipino orchestra, so well and favorably known to Capital playgoers.

Considerable spontaneous combustion is added to the lunatic developments by the jittery humor of Alice Brady and the ardent love-making of Louise Fazenda, who perceives her perfect mate in the fearful figure of the versatile Mr. Lahr. The romantic interest is preserved with ebulliently youthful enthusiasm by Joy Hodges and John King, with Barbara Read as a pert little menace to their eventual happiness.

The revue formula does not obtrude itself until well toward the end of the picture, and then only in the form of a garden party which Miss Brady stages with appropriate opulence and many bizarre entertainers, including Mr. Lahr again as a wrestler who wins his bout with the assistance of Mr. Auer's mental concentration on the dubious arts of the fakir. A pleasant time was had by all on both sides of the camera.

Varied Auxiliaries.

The auxiliary attractions of the new bill at RKO-Keith's are numerous and varied. Foremost among them is a new release of the "Screen Snapshots," with its many scenes of film stars at play. Second in importance comes Walt Disney's new Silly Symphony in Technicolor, "The Old Mill," a philosophic study of the effects of a storm at night upon all those mice, bluebirds, owls, ducks, bats and what not.

The Pathe News, featuring the unemployment census and labor's invitation to the Duke of Windsor to visit America, as delivered to the microphone by President Green, of the A. F. of L., is the final complement of a feature that was made for laughter only—and made good.

Columbia

Miss Shirley Temple yesterday took up a week's sojourn on the screen of Loew's Columbia Theater in "Heidi," the most appropriate starring vehicle she has had in recent months, presented in a repeat engagement following an eminently successful week at the Capitol.

"Heidi" is an elaborately produced screen version of the famous juvenile fiction in which a forlorn little girl, but a perpetually optimistic and appreciative one, is shunted about among relatives and relatives' friends, with no comfort to herself and to them until she melts the frozen heart of her octogenarian grandfather by the simple sweetness of her nature. Even then, she is "shanghaied" to Frankfort from her cabin home in the Alps to be farmed out to a rich man's family in which the governess is as despicable a character as the kidnaping aunt who deludes her into the belief that her trip to the city is only for a day's visit.

The events that transpire after that range from childish comedy to violent melodrama out of which comes a happy, if somewhat belated, adjustment of all the injustices and petty persecutions.

Shirley Temple is at her maturing best in this subject, although the picture is not without its structural defects and several of the supporting characters are seriously overdrawn. Jean Hersholt does one of his habitually able pieces of work as the forbidding grandfather, who finally discovers his heart, and Arthur Treacher is characteristically amusing as the wealthy man's butler. Mary Nash and Mady Christians are intrusted with the doubtful privilege of supplying the play's sinister notes.

The usual short subjects and the picturized "Events of the Day" augment the variety of a bill that would have been a perfect attraction for Christmas week.

Hollywood Reunion.

Old friendly enemies held reunion at Paramount recently when Charlie McCarthy, the radio dummy, visited W. C. Fields on the set of "The Big Broadcast of 1938." Only casualty was a splinter in the hand of Fields, received when he shook hands with his diminutive chum.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Nov. 11.—Every time I walk down Hollywood Boulevard, I think I am seeing double for, out of every ten young things who pass by, at least nine look as though they had been stamped out in the same mold. The costume worn by one is practically the same as the costumes worn by all of the others. Their hair is tinted to a common shade and dressed with the same little waves and curls. Their mouths and eyes are made up to fit a common pattern. Some are short; some are tall—but all seem to be trained down to approximately the same degree of leanness. And, more noticeable even than the similarity in outward detail, is the fact that all of them wear the same expressionless expression—a detached look that is evidently mistaken for a "sophisticated air."

HEPBURN.

Such imitation is the curse of Hollywood. Whenever a new glamour gal wins through to stardom, all of the industry's "wouldbes" immediately rush for their make-up tables and try to convert themselves into carbon copies. And, in the process, they throw overboard any chance they might have had for success. Name me any outstanding star, and I will show you a girl who had the courage to be "different." Imagine Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers, Joan Crawford or Sonja Henie fitting herself into a mold!

Every casting director tells me that he would give his all to find a "new" personality. What a sense of futility he must develop as he interviews Hollywood's army of painted dolls.

On the program of a Los Angeles theater the other night was a two-reeler featuring informal shots of various screen stars. As each actor and actress appeared on the screen, the audience applauded, faintly for some, enthusiastically for others. Robert Taylor was one of the last to make an appearance—and the scattered hand-clapping that greeted him was almost drowned by a chorus of boos from males in the audience! Near me sat a quartet of sailors. They added to the din by bellowing "Pretty Boy!"

It begins to look as though Bob has started down the skids—and MGM can thank one of the most ill-advised publicity campaigns in history. With mushy stories and mushier roles, the bosses of his studio tried to establish him as "God's Gift to Women"—and overdid it. Now, having seen their mistake, they are trying to depict him as a very "he" young man. I am afraid they saw the light too late.

Jack Haley tells this one on himself. The other day, in a scene for a current production with a Hollywood background, about a dozen stars' doubles were working. Jack sauntered in for a set visit and happened to sit down near them, whereupon one of the doubles, after appraising him for a moment, struck up a conversation. "Brother," he said, "I thought I knew all the doubles in town, but I've never met you before. I suppose you're doubling for Jack Haley—and I want to tell you the likeness is amazing. With the right make-up—and a little dumber expression—you could pass for him anywhere!"

William LeBaron, boss of production at one of the big studios, is the author of a little squib in which he contends that movie stars really have long careers. To illustrate his contention, he points to Jack Mulhall, Agnes Ayres, Ethel Clayton, Walter McGrail, Herbert Rawlinson, Jane Novak, Bryant Washburn, Frank Mayo, Creighton Hale, Louise Brooks and Evelyn Brent. "All of them are old-timers, and all of them are still active in pictures," he argues. Seems to me he chose poor examples. Not one of those former greats is earning more than the barest of living today.

Shirley Temple has organized her own "police force" and decorated each of her "cops" with a tin badge which bears the legend, "Shirley Temple Detectives." She is very serious about it and, after his experience of a few nights ago, so is one of the studio's ace directors. On his way home he was arrested for speeding, and after all of the tear-jerking alibis that he could concoct had failed, he hauled out Shirley's tin badge. The motorcycle officer examined it, angrily at first, then greedily. "Suppose you could get one of those for my kid?" he demanded. The director said he would be glad to—and you know the rest of the story.

About the Show Shops

Howard play aroused tremendous enthusiasm in Boston and has been privately recommended to this desk by several competent judges of dramatic values who have seen it. None of these is able to see how it can miss when it finally reaches Broadway.

Then there is "Madame Bovary," with Constance Cummings and Ernest Cossart, scheduled for an early New York showing, after having played successfully in several cities, including Chicago, since its premiere here at the National. The Guild is definitely looking up.

Speaking of "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle," brings to mind that Washington will have an interest in this production beyond the presence in the cast of Miss Barrymore and Mr. Digges, both of whom are said to resume their former eminence in the principal roles. Another member of the cast is Barbara Robbins, who will make her first appearance in the Capital, although she has been a successful actress on the West Coast and on Broadway. In private life, Miss Robbins is the wife of Robert Bell, who organized the famous Rams Head Players in this city a decade or two ago and more recently has been associated with the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York. Mr. Bell will return to his native city on Monday to attend his wife's first Washington performance in the role of a 17-year-old girl in the Howard drama.

No. 32 Blekingegaten street, in Stockholm's "South Side," is a busy hive of industry these days. Architects and builders are making plans and estimates for turning the old tenement into a fine modern apartment house.

The old building is the house where Garbo was born and where she lived as a child. The Swedish star celebrated her eleventh year in pictures, and her role with Charles Boyer in "Conquest" by buying the old tenement. It will be replaced by a fine apartment which she is presenting to her mother.

Both Garbo and her brother, Sven, were born in the old house. The family lived there until she was 15 years of age.

U. S. to Remain Silent on Shift In Brazil Rule

Welles Declines Comment But Any Evidence of Anxiety Is Lacking.

act in the midst of suspicions that he has placed Brazil within the orbit of nations whose forms of government are regarded as hostile to the democratic ideal, it is certain Congress would never authorize such an undertaking, even if the State Department renewed it, which is doubtful.

For instance, Senator William E. Borah, ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, predicted that committee would wish to await further developments in Brazil before authorizing the loan of the destroyers. For himself, he believed the new Brazilian regime had "every characteristic of fascism" and added he opposed "contributing in any way to the success of a system that is at war with every principle on which republican government rests."

Still May Extend Help.

But there appears to be no disposition to disturb the recent agreement between Brazil and this Government, whereby the latter will aid the former to stabilize its banking system. This agreement contemplated the sale of $60,000,000 of gold to Brazil for the establishment of a metallic reserve, and the sending of American financial technicians to that country to assist in improving its banking system.

The Brazilians have not acquired any gold under this agreement. Since the agreement was reached, Vargas has been so busy with political problems that he has deferred advancing with his economic plans. But should he now undertake to go ahead under that agreement, officials of this Government would be as pleased to co-operate as previously.

As a matter of fact, Brazil could buy gold from this country without any agreement with our Treasury, so that the practical value of the undertaking was the lending of American experts—and this is held to be as much an advantage to the United States as to Brazil. Indeed, the feeling here is that nothing should interfere with any practical scheme which contributes to international monetary and economic stability.

Vargas' decree suspending payments on Brazil's external debt affects some $170,000,000 of Brazilian governmental securities held in this country. But that will not be a new problem in the relations of the two countries, as the Brazilian foreign debt frequently has been in default due to that country's difficulty in obtaining sufficient foreign exchange. However, it is a matter which calls for negotiations now.

Subject to Two Views.

The lack of apparent anxiety on the part of American officials over what has happened in Brazil might be interpreted in two ways. It may be that their information regarding Vargas' intentions is inadequate, or that they are taking with a grain of salt suggestions that Vargas acted in league with Germany or Italy or that he has intentions of aligning himself with the anti-Communist front of Germany, Italy and Japan.

Since uncertainty usually is a breeder of distrust, it would appear that the latter view has more weight. Aside from the fact that the new Brazilian constitution is described in Rio de Janeiro as a "corporative constitution" and that the German Nazis have been making a play toward Brazil, Vargas' coup d'etat runs along the pattern of many previous Latin-American dictatorships.

On many occasions Latin-American rulers have taken steps to perpetuate themselves in power as their constitutional terms neared an end, without their governments becoming Fascist. Reports from both Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires assert that this constitution is more nationalistic than Fascist and that it provides considerable machinery for democratic government.

Much depends on whether Vargas will permit the application of those constitutional provisions for a chamber of deputies and whether a plebiscite will be held. But even should he suppress that political freedom, he would not necessarily have gone Fascist, it is held. It is possible that in order to perpetuate himself in power he has assumed the trappings and trimmings of fascism as an expedient.

Has Shunned Integralistas.

This contention is projected in view of the knowledge that Vargas always has shunned association with the Integralistas, the Fascist party in Brazil, which in recent months has grown in numbers, nor has he expressed sympathy with what has happened in Italy and Germany. Persons close to Vargas are known to have referred to the Integralistas in contemptuous terms.

On the other hand, there has been considerable Italian and German Fascist propaganda in Brazil in recent months through short-wave radio broadcasts. There is a sizable German population in Brazil, as well as a number of Italians. Nightly the virtues of fascism and the excellence of German and Italian commodities have been broadcast in Portugese—the language of Brazil—on short waves reaching that country. One result has been a large increase in trade between Germany and Brazil.

There also have been some Communist activities within the country, although this group lacks the status of a political party. Vargas has charged the Communists—and with some merit, it is said—with fomenting disorders in 1935. Fighting Communist propaganda frequently is a vehicle used by rulers seeking to perpetuate themselves in power and it has happened that campaigns against Communism become movements against all forms of liberal government.

Whether that will happen in Brazil is a matter of speculation. But so far there is no alarm here over a Fascist nation in this hemisphere. This Government long has known of the Fascist efforts in Brazil and other Latin-American countries and they constituted one reason for President Roosevelt's recent emphasis on the necessity for an unbroken democratic front in the Western Hemisphere. It also is the reason why this country has been desirous of strengthening its relationships in Brazil and throughout Latin America.

League Will Test Pre-School Vision

Junior League volunteers will give vision tests to pre-school children in the Health Department's health centers, the District of Columbia Society for the Prevention of Blindness has announced. Mrs. Mary Hopper Spencer, executive director of the society, reported at its board meeting that the volunteers have completed their training course for the project.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, a member of the board and chairman of the District Board of Education, announced plans for a contest in the public schools to provide a seal for th society. A first prize of $10 and five other awards will be given. The art directors of the public schools will have charge.

Mrs. William H. Wilmer, president of the society, presided at the meeting, at Barker Hall.

Commission Seeks to Cut Licensed Drivers From 4,800 to 2,500.

With the number of taxicabs on Washington streets increasing almost daily, the Public Utilities Commission will renew its efforts at the approaching Congressional session to obtain authority to effect reasonable limitation of hackers' licenses, Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman, said yesterday.

A bill drafted for this purpose is now pending on Capitol Hill, where it was rejected by the House last session.

Licensed cabs now number 4,800, whereas the commission and a majority of the cab drivers believe 2,500 would be adequate.

"A reduction in the number of taxicabs," Keech said, "would undoubtedly afford some relief to traffic congestion and would add to the physical and financial benefit of drivers."

Keech explained that no licenses would be withdrawn or drivers forced out of jobs. Instead, as permits were allowed to lapse, they would not be renewed, and no new licenses would be issued until the number of cabs was reduced to 2,500.

The commission also will ask the Senate and House District Committees to push legislation making liability insurance for taxicabs mandatory. The bill passed the House last year but failed to get through the Senate.

Commission members believe that the taxi insurance bill has a better chance of becoming a law at the next regular session of Congress than at any time in the past because of House approval.

The commission also is supporting a bill designed to put teeth into the organic act of the joint board of District Commissioners and the Public Utilities Commission.

This measure also passed the House, but was not called up in the Senate.

SUCCESS STORY— Chapter One

Chapter One in the success story of many business and professional leaders begins with a newspaper route. And we believe every one of these men would state emphatically that serving a newspaper route taught them the importance of service, thrift, neatness, to be reliable, ambitious and courteous.

The boys who service The Washington Post get even more. They are in business for themselves, making it even more important that they are neat, courteous and able to build their business through enterprise and service.

As young businessmen, it is important that they conduct their business on a paying basis. That means they must make their business grow by winning new customers and friends, by retaining customers they have obtained on their routes and by making regular, convenient deliveries and collections.

When The Post Newspaper Boy on your street calls to collect he is performing an important part of his business program. His collections control the profit he realizes from his business and his efforts. You can assist him in his first business venture by paying him when he makes his first collection call each week.

The Magnificent Christmas Esquire—Out Today

Wary as we are of superlatives, the December issue of Esquire is no usual Christmas issue of a magazine. The December Esquire—on sale today—is by way of establishing a new American tradition, not unlike those enjoyed by the Noël number of L'Illustration in France or, in England, the "Holly Leaves" edition of the London Illustrated News. It is a veritable art object, no less. And this, so help us, is understatement.

Esquire, this Christmas, is a gift in itself to yourself. Not only do you receive a magazine that is a limited edition in fact and content. Along with its superb reproductions of etchings, paintings and prints and all the regular features that render it, in truth, a collector's item—there is a galaxy of advertisers that reads like a social register for gift giving.

If you are concerned about what's new to give, what's smart to give and why—here are all your answers in a "first aid kit", pre-sifted and all organized for you in advance.

Here's one sure way of knowing your way around—and beforehand. It's the Christmas issue of Esquire—on sale at your favorite newsstand today. Why take any chances?*

Last year, a large Christmas printing of Esquire melted from the newsstands, almost before you could say "George Petty". They were completely sold out in less than one week. How long will this year's supply last? Your guess is as good as ours.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Who Should Move First to Heal Family Breach Caused by Forced Marriage, Elders or Youngsters?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am an only son; in fact, an only child. I have a good mother and I had a wonderful dad. I see it now that it is too late—for my dad has passed away and I am afraid I hastened his death by the way I treated him. I never knew what want was. I had everything I desired. I was waited on hand and foot. I worked if I wanted to or played if I wanted to. I never helped them in any way—not even to keep the fires going or the ashes cleaned up. But they never complained. They were happy to have me with them at any cost.

• • • •

Then, without telling them, I married, which nearly broke their hearts. The reason I didn't tell them was because I had to marry the girl; she was expecting a baby in a short time. Not knowing this, my parents asked us to come home and live with them. We did, without giving the reason for our hasty marriage. Everything was fine until someone told my parents about us. Then my mother got us together and gave us both a good tongue lashing—the only bitter words she ever dealt me in my life. Of course, we both got mad and left to go on our own.

• • • •

I'll admit the going has been pretty hard because my salary is very small. Our babies (they are twins) are over a year old now and we are expecting another child in a short time. I have never been back to see my parents in all that time, not even to tell them about the babies' coming, although I know they heard it before the babies were a day old. But they didn't come to see us, either. They have never seen the babies and now my dad is dead.

• • • •

Tell me, Miss Haworth, did I do wrong against my parents? Or did they do wrong against me? My wife and her friends tell me I am right; that my mother should come to me and ask forgiveness. I live in town and my mother is all alone now in the country but we could see each other in 30 minutes if we decided to do so. Should my wife and I go to her and ask forgiveness, or should my mother come to us? Please advise me in your column.

UNDECIDED.

What to Believe.

DEAR UNDECIDED: The question of who was right and who was wrong in the family quarrel is one that should never have been permitted to arise. That it is still open to answer is, in my opinion, largely your parents' fault. For they, as the older and presumably the wiser parties to the quarrel, should have hastened to mend it before it crystallized into an open breach. Although the circumstance of your marriage (for which you, of course, were responsible) directly provoked the quarrel, still and again I hold your parents primarily at fault in having foolishly indulged you from birth, so that you unconsciously assumed anything you wanted was yours for the taking. Some such cropper in life was just about what could have been expected in a badly spoiled only son, who had never been trained in self-disciplined social responsibility either to his parents or anyone else.

• • • •

Your mother's outburst of moral indignation on learning the truth of the marriage was definitely less than mature. While it was only natural that she might have felt shamed, humiliated and more or less heartbroken at the turn of events in her darling son's life, it seems to me she could and should have borne this cross in secret, consoling herself with the thought that at least her son had had the manliness to make what amends he could to the girl he had selfishly wronged.

• • • •

In view of your ill-advised rearing, I feel you did a rather unexpectedly manly thing for which you are to be commended (if we must search for brighter highlights in the picture) in openly acknowledging and shouldering your moral and social responsibility toward the girl and the babies. Furthermore, since your mother took the attitude she did, I believe you intuitively adopted the wisest possible course in getting out on your own with your wife. It was a mistake—as you learned with regret—to have moved in with your family in the first place, and it was probably one of the best things that ever happened that your mother's attitude obliged you to take a hasty and final departure, with your bridges so burned that you felt you could not return even under the greatest financial pressure.

• • • •

I can appreciate how you feel toward your mother; how remorseful you are that she and your father should have been made unhappy by your conduct; how your heart goes out to her today in her bereavement and utter loneliness, but I do not feel that you have any greater apology to make to her than she has to make to you and to your wife. Her humiliation and outrage was certainly no greater than that which the girl's mother must have known; and I am sure the girl you married must have experienced bad moments which far surpassed any suffering your mother underwent as a result of what happened. Your mother, if she could be soul-searchingly honest, would have to admit that it was her darling—her badly spoiled son—who was never asked, expected or required to do anything in life other than enjoy himself, who visited this suffering on others as a result of selfishness she had nurtured.

• • • •

One might say that the generous thing to do is to make peace with your mother on any terms. But I wonder if, in so doing, you wouldn't be inviting into your immediate family circle a militantly, obstinately prejudiced influence of an interfering sort which would automatically assert itself by driving you and your wife dangerously far apart. If peace can be made on terms of mutual forgiveness, in the sense of your mother's forgiving your sins of commission in return for your forgiving her sins of omission; with the understanding that the happiness and wellbeing of your wife and children are today your paramount concern; and the guarantee that your mother is prepared to respect this right, natural, adult transference of allegiance, then get in touch with her.

• • • •

I think, however, it would be a wrong approach, productive of unhappy results, for you to negotiate with her on the sorrowful son to wronged mother basis. It is, rather, a case where two persons were at fault in different ways; where each of these persons, it is to be hoped, is willing to make what amends are possible for certain wrongs thoughtlessly committed and ready to proceed in future on a basis of better understanding, greater tolerance and mutual respect.

Costume for Office Wear

Joan Bennett, star of the stage and screen, in a costume she wears in the current production, "Stage Door," and which she recommends as a suitable outfit for an aspiring young business girl. It consists of a navy blue silk crepe dress with white collar and cuffs, topped by a high-crowned, medium-brimmed navy felt hat, and swagger coat of tweed. Handbag, gloves and shoes are also navy blue.

Tailored Suit Best Investment For Business, Joan Bennett Says

Change of Sweaters, Blouses and Scarfs Make Ensemble Versatile in Wardrobe, Actress Holds; Prefers Simple Dress as Change.

By Ethel Ehlen.

"A TAILORED SUIT is the best investment a business girl can make, whether she is looking for a job or is already established as a high-powered executive."

This advice was given by Joan Bennett, who is now appearing in "Stage Door" in the role of an aspiring young career woman. "Suits are so versatile," she continued, "that with changes of sweaters, blouses, scarfs and skirts, you can give them many different appearances, and they are always in good taste as well as smart fashion."

Simple dresses of black, navy blue or brown, with white lingerie touches at throat and sleeves, are suggested by Miss Bennett as pleasant and sensible changes from the suit, if you tire of being tailored all of the time. "Hats for the business girl," she commented, "should have smart simplicity as the theme. With the silly hats now pervading the mode, one would have to indulge in a fresh hair-do every day."

Two Types of Hats.

In her own wardrobe, Miss Bennett said, she had two kinds of hats—those she wore when he hair was freshly "coiffed," and those that covered her hair well when it was begining to look a bit ragged. "Here are the two hats I hide under," she exclaimed, taking them from a shelf in her dressing room in the theater. One was a navy blue felt with tall crown and a medium-sized brim, the other a small black hat of the swagger type that pulls down on one side. A third hat in this category for evening she describes as a halo model worn with a long veil.

"I love colored gloves," she said. "Such tones as strawberry, bright green, bright yellow and turquoise blue do wonders to add chic to an all-black ensemble."

Sometimes Miss Bennett matches tinted gloves to hat and scarf or necklace, but for the business girl who must dress on a limited income she advises a more conservative choice of accessories.

"When applying for a job," she admonished, "forego the costume jewelry. To wear it may offend the taste of a potential employer and also give him the idea that you have a tendency to spend money foolishly." The same idea applies to make-up, she pointed out, the best choice being very little make-up to give a natural-looking complexion. For business coiffures, Miss Bennett suggests short and simple bobbed arrangements, none of the ultra-long styles now being affected by so many of the younger "career" women.

"Black is ideal as an evening or dinner dress color for the girl who hasn't a large wardrobe," she remarked. "It is smart, practical, and always a good fashion color." Miss Bennett's own wardrobe is made up largely of black this winter, although for daytime she is introducing brown into the color scheme, and turquoise blue for the evening. "I like dark colors for daytime wear," she added, "but for formal evening I usually go in for white or bright color tones."

Sense of Humor Seen Needed by Business Woman

A sense of humor and the ability to get along with people are given first place on the list of attributes for the successful business woman by Miss Carolyn E. Slocum, president of the Transcription Supervisors' Association.

Miss Slocum, who will act as chairman for the eleventh annual friendship dinner to be held at the American Woman's Club, Monday night, in New York, told in a recent interview of the characteristics she thinks necessary for employed women to cultivate.

"Good manners," she said, "are as important in a business office as in the social world, perhaps more so, since freedom from emotions is essential to those working under tension. No matter how expert or efficient a girl may be, if she has an unpleasant manner, shows jealousy, is gossipy or ill tempered, she will never get along in any business organization."

At the dinner Monday night the American Woman's Association will present its annual award for eminent achievement.

APPLE DUMPLINGS

2 cups of flour
4 teaspoons of baking powder
1 teaspoon of salt
2 tablespoons of shortening
¾ to 1 cup of milk
2 apples pared, cored and quartered

Sift the dry ingredients. Cut in shortening. Add only enough milk to make a soft dought. Roll ½-inch thick. Cut in 3-inch squares. Put one apple quarter in deep baking dish, folded side down. Cover with the sauce and bake for 40 minutes in a moderate oven.

LEMON SAUCE

2 cups of sugar
2 cups of water
¼ cup of butter
Lemon extract

Mix the ingredients and let come to a boil. Pour over the dumplings and bake as directed.

Using Odds and Ends.

Empty sugar and flour sacks come in handy for many household odds and ends. After thorough washing and boiling to remove all traces of lint and printed matter, they can be used as cleaning cloths or tied over the broom for sweeping down walls and ceilings, or dusting hardwood floors.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 11.

OUR FOUR-FOOTED friend is making his annual last stand at Madison Square Garden, and as I perched in my pew on the opening night of the National Horse Show I was vastly interested in this strange fusion of a tradition and a modern social circus.

ALICE HUGHES.

The noble steed today is a city rarity, though he still thrives at the race parks, and as the Lillian Russell ladies drove around the arena in their phaetons, with a footman stationed behind, I felt that it was the turn of the century, and that Diamond Jim Brady was sitting in Box 44. Tothose not interested in horseflesh save as something vivid and beautiful, the interminable judging is a ghastly bore. The faces around me were a study in fatal boredom—and, undoubtedly, so was mine.

But to take up this slack, the showmen insert thrilling entertainment. The international military jumping is grand, and our boys, Lieuts. Wing and Wright, led the foreigners that night, but got a smaller hand from the snobbish boxes, whose occupants dote on anything from over the big water. Most amazing of all, however, was the exhibition by the black horse battery of the Sixteenth Field Artillery of Fort Myer, Va., my dream of a beautiful military post. The way that maze of horses managed to gallop the six field-guns around the small area without smashing themselves and the Garden to bits was a masterpiece of training!

But it's a social tour de force, this great and gaudy sight. Society now opens "the season" with the horse show instead of the opera premiere. The boxes were filled with elegant, high-nosed gents in immaculate plug hats and claw-hammer coats, and with ladies dripping jewelry and costly furs. Flash bulbs flared incessantly, like fireflies. Now "Black Beauty" can go back to the barn. He's had his annual night, and a pippin it was!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The prettiest names in local society have now arrived from abroad to die for dear old Park Avenue. They are Princess Torlonia and her daughters, the Donnas Christina and Marina Torlonia—names like music. Let the season proceed!

• • • •

A flash of sadness struck me at the horse show. As I watched the beautiful blacks of the Sixteenth Field whirling the pieces around the arena, I suddenly realized that this plunging beauty was almost gone—that by tomorrow the field guns would be yanked by clanking and smelly tractors at 50 miles an hour—and so would pass the last faint touch of romance from the horror of modern war.

Though our city is dotted with museums of every conceivable kind, there's always room for one more. Now the ladies of The National Toy and Doll Collectors Club are plotting a museum for doll babies of all ages and nationalities and of national scope. The members are all grown-ups who save the toys for fun. Mrs. Mary E. Lewis is president and Mrs. Peggy Zere secretary, if you have any you want to exhibit. But I advise against the Quints. They probably have those!

The local star-chasing girls were simply frantic with woe when they found that Dream Man Brian Aherne was bedded at the Waldorf with a bad chill, and were thus cheated of their legitimate and pretty prey. Some wanted to picket the inn carying signs reading "Brian Aherne Is Unfair to Organized Nuisances."

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

WITH MEAT prices skyrocketing, the reducer will find compensation in the fact that as far as slimming goes, hamburger is just as good as filet mignon.

Meat is a big item in the reducer's diet. The amount of protein never is decreased in the reducer's menu—in fact, it may be increased, for science has discovered that you lose weight faster on a diet in which a large percentage of the calories are in protein.

Use of protein stimulates tissue metabolism, and the body actually uses more calories. In addition to accelerating weight loss, a large amount of protein in the diet increases its palatability and satiety. You do not feel hungry as quickly after a meal which includes protein in some form, such as meat, eggs, beans or cheese.

Liberal Serving Approved.

The protein content of the diet may be as high as 75 to 100 grams, or 300 to 400 calories, and a large part of this protein intake can be in the form of lean meat. The reducer may have a liberal serving of lean meat, fish or fowl daily. Don't overlook the fact that you have twice as much lean meat as fat meat for the same number of calories.

The method of cooking also affects the calorie value of a dish and the reducer must avoid fried foods. Meats should be broiled, baked or boiled. On a very strict reducing diet you can cut the fat from the meat before cooking to prevent its infiltration into the lean.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

"Now in Poland, we would have first a military parade," said the personable Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, stepping out of the receiving line to make himself heard above the clatter of teacups and the rumble of talk in the adjoining room.

All in answer to a question, of course, as to how Poland's independence day is celebrated in his homeland. "There," he added, "we have——"

The sentence was never finished. More guests had come up the winding stairway of the Polish Embassy and were ready to be announced. "Miss Joan Bennett!" was the name the aide called out in throaty tones. Back into line went the host. Knots of guests in the drawing room turned, all attention, toward the door, and the news rippled in whispers through the throng into the dining room.

Meanwhile, Miss Bennett was exchanging a lengthy greeting with Count Potocki. Looking every inch the proverbial Hollywood glamor-girl, she was dressed in a metalcloth frock with a pleated skirt, a silver fox cape with four gardenias on her shoulder, fancy sandals and a tricky black hat with a floating veil. Arriving with her was Don Hector Diaz Leguizamon, of the Argentine Embassy.

Miss Bennett Steals Show

From then on the reception celebrating Poland's independence was Miss Bennett's party. Diplomats, Senators and residential bon ton faded into the background as the star of stage and screen quietly stole the show. Friends of Senor Leguizamon crowded around. Admirers of Miss Bennett stepped in closer. Ambassadors and Ministers broke up the little groups in which they had been the center and approached to be introduced. From then until she and her escort left a few minutes later few other feminine guests had any attention.

But the event was well under way before Miss Bennett arrived. A Supreme Court Justice and his wife, another Supreme Court hostess and her daughter, a couple of Senators and a score of diplomats had already come and gone. Even if the star had not put in an appearance, the reception would have been one of the most successful thus far this season. Social lights blazed all over the place from the first minute guests were received. A number were still there at 7 o'clock and traffic was heavy in front of the Embassy for half an hour longer.

Justice and Mrs. Butler Among the Guests

"Everybody's here—even the Supreme Court," someone observed, surveying the notables as they arrived and drifted into the dining room. The Supreme Court, as well as virtually every other official circle, was represented in the big and distinguished gathering. Associate Justice and Mrs. Pierce Butler were there, and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts with her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Roberts. As these guests wandered into the dining room, the crowd followed, and the soft light of candles on the long table flickered on faces familiar at many diplomatic receptions, and on many who go only to those as special as the one yesterday.

Meanwhile, the Ambassador was busy greeting other important men and women. Receiving with him were the Counselor of the Polish Embassy, Witold Wankowicz and Mme. Wankowicz, the latter in a smart frock of black crepe, and the new military attache of the Embassy, Lieut. Col. Andrezej Chramiec, splendidly turned out in full military dress. Greatly missed by her many friends was the Ambassador's wife, Countess Potocka, who is still in Poland. Scattered about in the drawing room and the mirror-walled dining room were other members of the embassy staff, mingling among the guests.

Proof the party was an nusual success was borne out by the fact that Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, stayed much longer than she usually does at big receptions. Wearing an especially becoming black ensemble, she sat on a couch in the drawing room for well over an hour, talking with an interesting group which included the Italian Ambassador's wife, Donna de Suvich, who was also worthy of fashion note in her dark red frock topped with a black caracul bolero and a small black hat.

Diplomatic Corps Well Represented

The Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Marc Peter came up the long stairway with Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister. The Minister of Belgium and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz were there; also Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, in a black frock and hat and a silver fox cape; Countess Roberti, wife of the Secretary of the Italian Embassy, a stunning figure in a fox cape and a small peaked red hat; the Honorary Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Harold H. Sims.

Glimpsed in the crowd as the party progressed was the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos; also the Minister of Denmark, Otto Wadsted, who, in a brief discussion about books on his homeland, was especially enthusiastic about "Democracy in Denmark," the volume translated into English by the wife of Justice Brandeis and recently published in a handy edition by the National Home Library Foundation.

Others there from the Diplomatic Corps included the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera; the Ambassador of Turkey, Mehmet Munir Ertegun; the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitri; the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood, whose friends in the Capital are legion; the former First Secretary of the Hungarian Legation, Victor Babes, who has just been made Counselor and his attractive wife; Mr. and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, of the Canadian Legation.

Yesterday's party was the last Mrs. Homer S. Cummings will attend in Washington for awhile. She will leave today for New York, and plans to divide her time between there and Connecticut for the next week or ten days. Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, who recently returned to Washington for the special session of Congress were particularly popular at the reception, as was Senator William H. King. The Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, sisters of Senator Guffey were there, and Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom. Most of the guests, in addition to members of the Diplomatic Corps, however, were residential Washingtonians, including a surprisingly large number of "cave dwellers."

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, in a sable-trimmed coat and hat, came with Miss Bell Gurnee. Mrs. Mark Bristol's brown costume was also set off with sables. Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins and Mrs. Pearsons Rust were in black. Among others seen there were Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis, Mrs. McKenney Mallan, Clarence Hewes, Albert Dewey, whose wife is spending a few days in New York; Robert Coe, who has known Count Potocki for a number of years; Mrs. Robert Joyce, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Miss Rebecca Wellington, Miss Marion Trumbull, Mrs. Marshall Exnicios and Mrs. Morris Clark.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Residential

Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland, will not observe her day "at home" this afternoon as she had originally planned.

• • • •

• • • •

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Walter Kreuger have as their guests their daughter, Mrs. Aubrey Dewitt Smith, of Fort Benning, Ga., and their granddaughter, Sharon Kreuger Smith. They will be here for about a month.

• • • •

Mrs. Lawrence B. Biebel and her daughter, Miss Jane Hopkins Biebel, of Dayton, Ohio, are visiting Mrs. Biebel's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred M. Hopkins, of Chevy Chase.

• • • •

The Rev. and Mrs. William Pence James have returned to their home in East Riverdale after a five weeks' vacation through the Middle West. They spent four days at the general convention of the Episcopal Church in Cincinnati, and en route home stopped in Pittsburgh for a visit.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Parker, of Atlanta, Ga., have arrived in town and while here for several days they are occupying a suite at the Carlton Hotel. Mr. Parker is connected with the Federal Land Bank in Atlanta.

• • • •

• • • •

Dr. and Mrs. Robert Beale are motoring with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Bennett, to Charleston, S. C., where they will visit their nephew, the Rev. Albert Rhett Stuart, over the week-end.

Heiskells Will Present Daughter on Nov. 20

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Lewis Heiskell have issued invitations to a tea on Saturday, November 20, at which their daughter, Miss Elaine Fitzhugh Powell Heiskell, will be presented to society.

The event will take place at the Heiskell home, Kildare, near Oxon Hill, Md., from 4 to 7 o'clock. The debutante is the granddaughter of the noted landscape painter, Lucien Whiting Powell.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT WOODS BLISS will give a luncheon on Sunday at Dumbarton Oaks, their impressive Georgetown estate. Among the guests will be A. Conger Goodyear, president of the Museum of Modern Art in New York, who is arriving here early Sunday morning and probably will return to his home in New York late that evening. He is coming especially to be present at the preview of the Washington Gallery of the museum, of which Mrs. Dwight Davis is chairman.

Mr. Goodyear's name has been so consistently connected with art in recent years that it is something of a surprise to find him listed in "Who's Who" as a manufacturer. It's rather a far cry from president of a lumber company to a collector of modern French paintings, yet Mr. Goodyear is both. He was one of the first Americans to realize the worth of such artists as Braque, Modigliani and others whose names are now household words in art circles. Since the days when Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, jr., first founded the Museum of Modern Art, Mr. Goodyear has been a trustee.

Most of the guests on Sunday evening will no doubt want to go back and take a second look at the gallery's exhibit of post-impressionists. For it will be difficult to concentrate on pictures when the rooms are seething with celebrities and their beautifully gowned bejeweled wives.

RUMORS THAT the Rumanian Minister, Charles A. Davila, would not return here from a vacation in his country, must have been just another of the false alarms in which Washington society abounds. The Minister docks in New York on Monday aboard the Queen Mary, and is expected to come shortly afterward to the Capital.

Members of society here are glad it isn't true what they said about Davila, as he is one of the most popular members of the Diplomatic Corps. One of our best bridge players, he also likes to dance and is a frequent diner-out. The fact that he was a bachelor did not detract from his popularity, as Washington is a paradise for extra men, especially when they also happen to be ministers.

The Capital can ill afford to lose any more bachelor diplomats, the way things are now. Think of the ones who have left in the past two or three years: Hans Luther, former German Ambassador; Claude de Boisanger, of the French Embassy; Louis Micheli, now Counselor of the Swiss Legation in Rome; Tomasi and Migone, of the Italian Embassy—the former is now married—and Ramon Padilla, who until the revolution in Spain was Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy here.

IF YOU THINK that the life of a diplomat is all beer and skittles, read how one prominent former envoy describes himself:

"A career diplomat, accustomed from early manhood to devote himself with all his being to advancing the interests of his country, to act a hundred times in ways contrary to his convictions, and to exercise his own initiative only to the extent of choosing the methods for carrying out the plans of his superiors."

Sounds a bit dreary, doesn't it? The above is an excerpt from a new book, "The Last Spanish War—Revelations in 'Diplomacy.'" The author is Orestes Ferrara, Cuban Ambassador here from 1926 to 1931. In this volume, which has been translated from the Spanish, Mr. Ferrara deals with a subject which was his avocation for 30 years—the study of Cuba's struggle for independence from Spain.

MR. AND MRS. DEAN ACHESON have cards out for a tea, from 4 until 7, on Friday, November 26, at their residence, 2805 P street in Georgetown. It will be a small party in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss Jane Acheson, who is coming home for the Thanksgiving holidays from Bennington College . . . Friends of Baron and Baroness Serge Korff will be glad to know they will be here until December. They are staying with the former's mother, Baroness Korff, until going to Pennsylvania, where Baron Korff has been lent to Swarthmore College by the Carnegie Institute. Baroness Korff is the former Miss Alice Graeme . . . Mrs. Victor Mallet, wife of the Counselor of the British Embassy, has returned to her home at 2374 Massachusetts avenue after a vacation in England and a trip to Persia.

Hulls Return to D. C. After 2-Week Stay At Carolina Resort

After a long summer in Washington, their fortnight in North Carolina, away from the cares of the big, gray buildings at Pennsylvania avenue and Seventeenth street, marks their first real vacation in months.

Before going to Pinehurst they made a short official trip to Canada.

Sister and Niece Visiting The Rev. M. B. MacBryde

Mrs. Christopher G. Guignard and her daughter, Mrs. Susan Sparks, arrive today from Columbia, S. C., to be the guests of the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde. Mrs. Sparks, his niece, will assist him at the ball to be given at the Sulgrave Hotel this evening for the benefit of the Guild of Grace Church.

Parties Before Dance.

A number of cocktail parties will precede the dance which the Young Republican Club of the District of Columbia will give this evening at the National Woman's Country Club. Among those who will entertain are Albert E. Conradis, president of the club; Churchill B. Groves, Hayward W. Strecker and Malcolm Sharpe. Mr. Strecker is chairman of the dance committee and is assisted by William Mondell, Donald Webster and Philip King, jr.

Congressional Set Hits Town Ready for Work

If they all got together and marched right up Pennsylvania avenue they'd make quite a parade—maybe an hour passing that usual given point. In fact, hardly a minute ticks by but what some member of the Congressional set arrives in Washington these days, special-sessoin bound.

For instance . . . the Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner are expected to be in the Capital either today or tomorrow from Uvalde, Tex., where the Vice President has been enjoying a nice vacation in the outdoor manner. They will be, as formerly, at the Washington Hotel.

And then there's the Speaker of the House and Mrs. William B. Bankhead, who catapulted into town yesterday and came up smiling at the Mayflower Hotel. With them was the Speaker's brother and sister-in-law, Senator and Mrs. John H. Bankhead, checking their suitcases at the same wayside Inn.

Senator Joseph F. Guffey and his sisters, the Misses Pauletta and Ida Guffey, are now settled in their new residence on Bent ton place. With them are the Interstate Commerce Commissioner and Mrs. Carroll Miller, brother-in-law and sister of the Senator, who will make their home with him this winter.

Senator and Mrs. Alva B. Adams returned to their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel yesterday. Senator and Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney have rejoined their niece, Miss Agnes Doherty, also at the Wardman, where Miss Doherty has been right along.

Add to the list the House majority leader, Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, already back at a busy desk after a vacation in his home State. He put foot in Washington on Wednesday morning.

And open ranks in the parade to include Representative Gardner R. Withrow and Mrs. Withrow, who have arrived at the Kennedy-Warren from their home in La Crosse, Wis.

A newcomer to Washington is Representative Bruce Barton, of New York, who, with Mrs. Barton, swings into Washington today to join Miss Betsy Barton, their daughter, who has already taken an apartment for them at the Shoreham Hotel.

Some, however, got here before the big rush started . . . namely, Representative and Mrs. Ralph E. Church, of Chicago, who have been installed at the Shoreham since the first of the month; not to mention Representative and Mrs. John J. Cochran, of St. Louis, who foresaw a possible early session and returned a whole week ago to their apartment, kept in readiness for such an emergency all through the summer.

Soldier Sonnet Is Read at Tea

By Elizabeth Ford.

The last talkative teacup rattled into silence. Standing on the polished floor of the stage of the King-Smith Playhouse yesterday afternoon, an unassuming woman in pastel colored blouse and dark skirt was reading Rupert Brooke's sonnet, "The Soldier."

The usual sandwich-balancing, the quick chatter of a large tea was forgotten as Ellen Van Volkenburg's soft voice repeated the lines of the poem. Guest of honor at yesterday's affair on Armistice Day, she had chosen Rupert Brooke who, like our own Allan Seegar, had written of the war.

One of the pioneers of the country's Little Theater movement, her presence there in the candle-lighted auditorium, with its quaint red and white decorations, reminding one of the gay uniform of an Ernest Dowson "Pierrot," seemed most appropriate. She will be here in Washington until Saturday as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. August King-Smith, then back to New York to read a play from London . . . and if she likes it, a tour.

Co-guest of honor with Miss Van Volkenburg was Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson . . . whom you'll remember from your programs, of course, as Frances Starr. A petite figure in black with silver fox, she said the most important thing she was doing these days was to "get her hous fixed up for the winter, hang curtains and all that sort of thing" and then casually added that she had been considering a turn with the footlights this season. Nothing is definite, but she has already "gone over" three new plays.

On the receiving line also were Mrs. King-Smith in green and gold and Mrs. Vachel Lindsay in black velvet. Glimpsed among the guests were Miss Ellen Woodward, of the Works Progress Administration, who in a costume of rich autumn brown, chatted with Miss Van Volkenburg about the Federal Theater project; Katharine Frost; Baroness d'Sounis, Julia E. Schelling and Lewis Lofton Moneyway, president of the Arts Club.

Senator's Wife To Write Views

What Mrs. Vandenberg, wife of Senator Vandenberg, thinks about Washington goings-on will now be set down in cold, hard print, for she has recently signed up as a contributor to the D. A. R. Magazine, of which Frances Parkinson Keyes has recently assumed the editorship. The first of Mrs. Vandenberg's articles will be off the presses by the January issue.

Her comments will have a strong social slant with names named and places placed . . . a current picture of Washington shindigs.

Mrs. Vandenberg comes to her typewriter true and tried for she "used to be a newspaper woman" herself and as Hazel Whitaker was a member of the Chicago Tribune staff before her marriage. Recently she has kept her hand from losing its journalistic skill by writing for a magazine published for club women in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Mrs. Amory Perkins Honors Niece With Cocktails Today

Mrs. Amory Perkins and Mrs. J. Blaise de Sibour are entertaining at a cocktail party today at the latter's home on Bancroft place. The party is in honor of Mrs. Perkins' niece, Miss Leita Amory, daughter of Austin Amory, of Boston. She has come to Washington to spend the winter here and is studying at a secretarial school.

Mrs. Perkins, who resides at the Shelter in Middleburg, is having a new home built nearby, for which George Howe is architect. Mr. and Mrs. Howe will give a small cocktail party next Tuesday and will entertain at a dinner December 3 before the party to be given that evening by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss.

Miss Garrett to Entertain.

Miss Margot Garrett will entertain at a cocktail party tomorrow for guests who are coming from out-of-town for the dance to be given by Mrs. Joseph Leiter for her daughter, Miss Nancy Leiter. Miss Garrett is the daughter of George Angus Garrett.

Leonard Horburys Visitors in Capital

Mr. and Mrs. W. Leonard Horbury, of Rugby, England, are spending a few days at the Shoreham while here to visit Mrs. Horbury's sister, Mrs. Anne G. Morgan. Upon leaving Washington they will go to the Vallejo Polo Ranch at Cimarron, N. Mex., to spend six months.

Mr. and Mrs. Horbury expect the Duke and Duchess of Windsor to visit this ranch when they come to America. It consists of 53,000 acres, of which Mr. Horbury is the principal owner. He is a widely known polo player.

Miss Taylor Is Married To Mr. Miller, of Atlanta

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Echols Taylor announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Marjorie Ann Taylor, to David Steele Miller, of Atlanta, Ga., on October 25. The couple will return from their wedding trip and be at home after November 15 at Randolph Terrace.

The bride is a graduate of Stuart Hall, while the bridegroom is an alumnus of Georgia Tech.

House Designed by Benjamin H. Latrobe Was Occupied by Henry Clay, Martin Van Buren and Other Celebrated Men.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Historic Decatur House at Jackson place and H street will be preserved for posterity if members of the Professional Writers' Club and other organizations are successful in a crusade now being launched to interest the country in making it a national shrine.

Hanging in the library of the home is a certificate bearing the seal of the Department of the Interior, and the signature of Secretary Harold Ickes, which reads: "This house has been selected by the advisory committee of the Historic American Buildings Survey as possessing exceptional historic or architectural interest and as being worthy of most careful preservation for the benefit of future generations, and to this end a record of its present appearance and condition has been made and deposited for permanent reference in the Library of Congress."

Last spring, when the house was opened for a benefit for the Navy Relief, Miss Cawood and a friend visited it and learned in conversation with Mrs. Beale it was to be sold when her late husband's estate was settled. A resolution by the Professional Writers' Club to sponsor a movement for the preservation of the property was passed at its next meeting at Miss Cawood's suggestion.

With Mrs. Beale's sanction, organizations throughout the city are being circularized by the Writers Club in an effort to gain their co-operation in working out a plan by which the house may be preserved as a public shrine. No definite program for accomplishing this end can be announced until the various groups which will join with it have signified their interest and appointed representatives on a committee which will define the action to be taken.

The Constitution, which was Stephen Decatur's ship, was saved through public appeal and the donation of the pennies of school children. It is the most famous ship in the United States Navy, affectionately known as "Old Ironsides," and during the war with Tripoli, 1801 to 1805, was Commodore Preeble's flagship. As junior captain of the fleet, Stephen Decatur was ordered to assume her command in the fall of 1804, a command which he held until the following March.

The Decatur House, which was his home, assumes district importance as an historic landmark through this and other associations, Miss Cawood pointed out, and should awaken the same Nation-wide interest which was aroused in behalf of "Old Ironsides."

It was designed by Benjamin H. Latrobe, architect of St. John's Church, in 1816, and one of the early architects of the United States Capitol. It was built for Commodore Decatur in 1819 with his prize money won in the wars with the Barbary pirates, and was the first private house constructed on LaFayette Square after the White House. In the door are "look-outs" where slaves were posted during the occupancy of Martin Van Buren, Secretary of State under President Jackson. Similar ones on the White House roof made possible a system of wig-wagging before the days of the telephone.

Decatur and his young bride had lived in the house little more than a year when he was brought home mortally wounded from his duel with Commodore Barron at Bladensburg.

After Decatur's death, many famous men lived there. Baron DeTuyl, Russian Minister to the United States was the first. Then came Henry Clay, Secretary of State under President Adams; Van Buren and Edward Livingston succeeding secretaries under President Jackson; Sir Charles Vaughn, British Minister to the United States; John Gadsby, "mine host" of the old National Hotel; Baron Hyde de Neuville, French Minister to the United States, and a grandson of Commodore Thomas Truxun, Edward Fitzgerald Beale. He was a hero of the Mexican War, explorer of the West, and helped to found the State of California. President Grant appointed him United States Minister to Austria.

Mrs. Beale, who now occupies the historic mansion, is the widow of his son, Truxtun Beale.

Church League Plans Bazaar

Chevy Chase Methodist Unit Sets Annual Function for Thursday.

Mrs. Lew Mohler, president of the Woman's League of the Chevy Chase Methodist Church, has announced plans for the annual turkey dinner and bazaar, which will be held in the Sunday School House, Connecticut avenue and Shepherd street, next Thursday. The bazaar will open at 3:30 p. m., and the dinner will be served from 5:30 p. m.

Two new features of the bazaar this year will be the country store, in charge of Miss Byrd Belt, and the parcel post booth, in charge of Mrs. Harold Snape. The former will be decorated to represent an old country store and will have farm commodities and articles "at prices lower than they were during the depression," says the announcement.

Mrs. Snape, by having members mail out postcards to friends in various cities, has solicited articles which will be sold in their original wrappings for 25 cents each.

The following league members will serve as chairmen of the various committees: Dinner, Mrs. Pearl Edwards; dining room, Mrs. William Orem; tickets, Mrs. E. G. Latch, 9 Shepherd street, Chevy Chase, Md.; fancy work, Mrs. Joseph DeVeau; aprons, Mrs. George Maxfield; cake, Mrs. Frank Troth; candy, Mrs. Elmer Simpson and Mrs. Lester Simpson, and grab bags, Mrs. L. Reeves.

Four Phi Delta Delta Chapters Take Part in Founders' Fete

Phi Delta Delta, women's international legal sorority, last night held its annual founders' day banquet in the Queen Elizabeth room of the Raleigh Hotel, with the four local chapters participating. They include Beta at Washington College of Law, of which Mrs. Edith Spaulding Petersilia is president; Zeta, at George Washington, of which Miss Louisa Wilson is president; Alpha Lambda, at National University, of which Miss Edna Mae Miller is president, and the Alumnae Chapter, headed by Miss Ina Russell.

Miss Russell presided at the function, at which there were 60 guests. Among them were Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, past national president and now honorary president of the sorority; Judge Mary O'Toole, Miss Corinne Quarles, chairman of the dinner, Miss Grace Knoller, also a past national president; Miss Annabel Matthews, Judge Marion Harron and Miss Helen Carloss.

Both Zeta and Alpha Lambda Chapters have announced parties to be given Sunday. Zeta Chapter is entertaining at an informal supper at the Officers' Club of the Army War College for members of the sophomore class of the George Washington University Law School, and Alpha Lambda Chapter is having a tea from 4 to 6 in El Patio of the Carlton Hotel, an affair sponsored annually during the fall term at National University School of Law.

Among the invited guests of honor for the tea will be Mrs. Willebrandt, Judge Harron, of the United States Board of Tax Appeals; Miss Matthews, former judge of the United States Board of Tax Appeals and president of the Woman's Bar Association of the District of Columbia; Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court; Judge O'Toole, former judge, Municipal Court; Miss Pearl McCall, former assistant district attorney; Miss Stella Akin, special assistant to the Attorney General; Miss Ann O'Neill, assistant legal adviser, Department of State; Miss Helen Carloss, special assistant to the Attorney General; Mrs. Mary Connor Myers, Dr. Jean Stephenson, and Mrs. Mabel Benson Sakis.

Miss Miller, president of Alpha Lambda Chapter, will head the receiving line. Assisting will be Cathrine Edmondson, Louise Chandler, Alice Kieferle and Elisabeth Connor Buchanan.

The committee in charge of arrangements includes Ruth Ellis, chairman; Sally Presley, Florence McLouth and Irene Wright. Flowers in the sorority colors, old rose and violet, will decorate the tea table arranged in fraternal design.

Miss Helene Finnacom, concert pianist and member of the Washington Pianist Club, will play.

Miss Ella Cooper is chairman of the committee on arrangements for the Zeta Chapter supper, assisted by Miss Lois Adams and Miss Eve Kailey.

Among the prominent alumnae members who are expected to attend are Miss Lois Gates Gorman, editor of Phi Delta Delta magazine and former vice president of the fraternity; Judge Herron, Judge Bentley, Mrs. Mary Connor Myers, attorney with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration; Judge Mary Agnes Brown, of the Veterans' Administration and former president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter; Miss Alma Prienkert, registrar of the University of Maryland; Miss Carloss and Miss Louise T. Foster, of the Department of Justice; Judge Lucy Howorth and Faye Woodward, of the Veterans' Administration; Miss Ellyne Strickland, of the Bureau of Internal Revenue; Miss Gladys Harrison, of the Social Security Board, and Miss Grace McEldowney, secretary to Senator Copeland.

D. A. R. Lunch Set Tomorrow

Capt. Joseph Magruder Chapter, D. A. R., will give a benefit luncheon tomorrow at the home of Regent Mrs. Arthur S. Field, 3607 Lowell street. The proceeds will go to the educational activities of the chapter. Mrs. Joseph A. Horner is chairman of arrangements, assisted by Mrs. David D. Caldwell, Mrs. Frank R. Damron, Mrs. Herbert R. Eck and Mrs. Herbert E. Merwin.

A program of travel talks by members will follow. Mrs. Anna Belle Stewart will describe her journey last summer to northern Europe and Miss Lida B. Earhart will tell of her visit to Mexico.

Continental Chapter will hold a card party tomorrow afternoon at the home of Miss Evelyn Yeomans, 3740 McKinley street, to raise funds for continuing a scholarship at the Crossnore School. Among those sponsoring the party are Miss Annie M. Alexander, Miss Isabel Beer, Mrs. Harry Colfax Grove, Miss Carolyn M. Whitlock, Miss Mary J. Edmands, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Murray and Mrs. Howard E. Middleton. Mrs. Stanley H. Beasley is in charge of arrangements and reservations.

Guest Artist at Club Concert

Club to Present Winter Music

Next Friday night at Leland Junior High School, the Newcomb-Bethesda Community Singers, a group of talented singers from the Newcomb Club, under the direction of Ruth Morgan, will present a program of winter numbers.

The singers have invited several guest artists from Washington to assist them. Miss Sylvia Meyer, harpist of the National Symphony Orchestra, will give several selections and accompany the singers. Miss Evelyn Scott and Mrs. Ruth Logan, violinists, also will play, and the Lisa Gardiner dancers, with Miss Mary Day as the soloist, will appear on the program. The Mandoleers, a group of men, who use all fretted instruments, also will present selections.

The nal number of "Winter Music," "The Skaters," by Waldteufel, will include soloists, dancers and chorus. The dancers in costume of 1850 will dance to the accompaniment of the singers and guest artists.

The Newcomb Club, with Mrs. A. Brookhouse Foster, president, is sponsoring the program. The proceeds will be given to the Student Loan Fund of the club, used each year to help some girl or boy in college.

Writer Visits Capital.

Mrs. Michael Pym, the writer, and Miss Ethel Merritt, her cousin, of Leacote, Rhinebeck, N. Y., have arrived to pass several days in Washington, and are at the Shoreham. They are on their way to Coconut Grove, Fla., to spend the winter.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

Report comes from New York, where the State Federation has been in session in Albany, of the withdrawal of Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, of Port Chester, as candidate for first vice president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. She withdrew, according to the announcement, on the advice of her oculist.

This leaves as candidates for the office the Maryland State Federation's nominee, Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, State chairman of education, and Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, of Chicago, who is now second vice president, and chairman of the American Home Department in which she has been interested for many years.

MRS. HAROLD BRYANT and members of her nature study group in the Chevy Chase Woman's Club have inaugurated their District girdling trips, in which they will follow the District line. Yesterday they met at Chevy Chase Circle for their pilgrimage to the first milepost. They mapped their outings some weeks ago, going by motor car to the sites of the old mileposts, placed along the District line in 1792. Their meetings during the fall will take them from milepost to milepost on each journey.

Two new sections, the German group under Mrs. St. Clair Thomas, and the Juniors under Mrs. Arthur E. Nesbitt, have made rapid growth since the opening of the season. The German section now has 26 members and the Juniors, 62. Eleanor Finch has been elected junior president.

THE WOMAN'S GUILD of McKendree Methodist Church (one of the oldest churches in the District) is planning one of its turkey dinners for next Wednesday night in the lecture room of the church edifice.

The guild hasn't such a big membership, for the church is small, but it does have a large reputation for the suppers it serves. The first this season was a chicken patty supper and now the season for the turkey variety is on. There will, of course, be all the trimmings including real, home-made pies.

The women do all the work themselves, including preparing and stuffing the turkeys, but the birds are cooked by a commercial firm which has facilities for doing them all at once "just to the queen's taste," say those who patronize the affairs.

PLANS ARE being made by Constitution Chapter of the D. A. D. for an "extra special" program Tuesday evening, in the studio of the D. C. branch of the League of American Pen Women. It is under the direction of Mrs. Marie Morris, who will accompany Thelma Hardy in a group of songs from "The Bohemian Girl," which she is presenting in costume. Eileen Eiden also will sing, doing first a group in colonial costume, followed by a solo interpretation of the Minuet, and then a modern group and a toe tap.

Miss Eiden was known as Betty Engerman, the dancer, until she discovered she could sing as well as dance, and then she adopted a new name for her combination programs. All of the artists are members of Mme. Correa's Washington Opera Guild.

Legion Women Stage Dinner

Mrs. Malcolmn Douglas Is Guest of Honor at Army and Navy Club.

A day of patriotic ceremonies was climaxed for the American Legion Auxiliary last night by a dinner given at the Army and Navy Club in honor of its national president, Mrs. Malcolm Douglas, of Seattle, Wash., and the Armistice Day ball of the American Legion which followed, at the Mayflower.

Mrs. Douglas, before her election as national president at the New York convention, had served three years as a member of the national executive committee of the organization and as national vice president and national historian. She has also served two years as chairman of the national defense committee.

She has been active in the auxiliary in Seattle ever since it was formed as well as prominent in the city's civic and charitable projects. Her husband, who was a captain in the Second Division, overseas during the World War, is now president-judge of the superior court judges of the State of Washington.

Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, department president of the auxiliary, presided at the dinner, and the guests included many officers of the auxiliary and its affiliated organizations.

In addition to Mrs. Douglas, they included Gen. James Drain, past national commander of the American Legion, and Mrs. Drain; Col. Bolles, past national adjutant and Mrs. Bolles; Fred Money, senior vice commander of the department and Mrs. Money; Mrs. Mary Haws, national chapeau of the Eight and Forty; Mrs. John McCabe, chapeau departmental, and Mr. McCabe, D. C. chef de gare of the Forty and Eight; Mrs. Louise Warren, national chairman of public relations for the Eight and Forty; J. O'Connor Roberts, national chairman of national defense, and Mrs. Roberts; Watson Miller, national chairman of rehabilitation for the American Legion, and Mrs. Miller; Theodore Cogswell, national Armistice Day chairman, W. N. Morrel, national pilgrimage chairman, and Mrs. Morrel.

Others present included John Thomas Taylor, national chairman of legislation, and Mrs. Taylor; Paul Griffith, Col. Julius Peyser, past department commander, and Mrs. Peyser; Gen. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Brady, Mrs. Martin Dyer, chairman of distinguished guests; Miss Edna McIntosh, Mrs. Frank O'Connor, and Mrs. Egbert Carwin, past department presidents; Mr. Corwin, Miss Minnie Hay Hardy, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ware.

Unit presidents who were there included Mrs. Eula Hollis, Mrs. Zelda Mulvey, Mrs. Mary McMillin, Miss Leah Fuller, Mrs. Ola Lee, Miss Faustine Dennis, Mrs. Helen Mahoney and Mrs. Marguerite Hicks.

Army Gridmen Wary of Crippled Irish.

By Shirley Povich.

("Badly Battered Notre Dame Team to Face Army Saturday; Irish Squad Crippled by Pitt Game."—Headline.)

But at West Point there will be no disposition to turn any handsprings or raise any huzzahs at the above report which emanates from South Bend and seemingly makes Notre Dame a soft touch. In fact, Army's worst fears are probably realized.

Against a Notre Dame team in good health, Army had a decent chance to win. Against one of those "crippled" Irish teams, Army appears up against it. Notre Dame's "cripples" in the past have staged some of the most miraculous recoveries ever known. When that opening whistle blows they are apt to become the liveliest set of invalids who ever trod on a gridiron. And Army knows that. Army men need go back no farther than 1932, when another Notre Dame team came out of the West with its coaches weeping bitter tears and predicting dire results.

POVICH.

Seven of Notre Dame's "key" men were sick or hurt, according to Coach Hunk Anderson the day before that game. "We'll be lucky if we hold 'em to three touchdowns," he added. Throughout the week preceding the battle, reports from South Bend read like the casualty list at Chateau Thierry. It would be some kind of a victory if Notre Dame could place 11 men on the field.

To hear Anderson tell it, influenza had scourged the squad. His best back, George Melinkovich, was running a temperature that gave him no license to live. Jim Harris, one of his star linemen, had just suffered a relapse. Emmet Murphy, one of his quarterbacks, was also down with flu.

It was pretty tough all right. Army was one of the good teams in the country that year and Notre Dame needed all it had to get away with the game. But there wasn't much hope, Anderson said. Four of his stars who weren't down with influenza were suffering from injuries. His two regular ends, Capt. Paul Host and Ed Kosky were on crutches, and Joe Kurth, his ace tackle, couldn't limp a dozen feet without suffering the tortures of hades. Halfback Ray Brancheau had a shoulder that popped in and out of place like a jack-in-the-box.

But there wasn't much to do about it except to go ahead and play the game. Notre Dame coaches wiped away their tears and bravely sent the remnants of their squad through the paces at their Westchester County training camp. The "crippled" Irish team was simply marching to the slaughter and New York betting commissioners were offering 2 to 1 against the South Benders.

Eventually came the bright Saturday afternoon, 2 o'clock and the opening whistle. And there must have been some mistake. Because, as I was saying, those "crippled" and injured Notre Dame stars were the liveliest set of near corpses that a football field ever saw. The final score was Notre Dame, 21; Army, 0. And the Irish narrowly missed no less than five other touchdowns.

Poor George Melinkovich, who was running that awful temperature, did very well for a guy who could hardly drag himself out of bed. He ripped up that Army line, bamboozled the West Pointers with his passes, and scored two touchdowns before the 80,000 in the park could identify him. But at the end of the game, the effort had proved too much for him. He couldn't take advantage of Coach Anderson's permission to the boys to make a round of the night clubs. Melinkovich could only make four clubs.

And Jimmy Harris, the lineman, who had been having an

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 11.—Washington's Redskin football team helped West Virginia's Capital City celebrate Armistice Day by coming from behind to defeat the Cincinnati Models of the Midwest League, 21-7, before 10,000 fans.

The Models led 7-0 at the half by virtue of an 80-yard run on a fumble in the first quarter. Cliff Battles led the attack down the field after the kick-off with gains of 5, 15 and 16 yards to the 14. Ernie Pinckert fumbled on a reverse and Ace Word grabbed it on the 20.

Word raced to midfield and tossed the ball to Jack McKenna, who sprinted for a touchdown. Roy Fitzgerald rushed into the game and drop-kicked the extra point on the third try after two penalties.

The Redskins started another drive and reached the 17-yard line, where Slingin' Sammy Baugh fumbled and the Models recovered. Battles passed to Pinckert for 12 yards in this march and Baugh rifled a 29-yard pass to Ed Justice. Baugh also had a gain of 12 yards.

With the Models unable to gain, Washington marched from their own 20 to the 13 stripe as the half ended. Baugh led the drive with gains of 16 and 6 yards, besides throwing two passes to Ben Smith for gains of 19 and 14 yards and another to Justice for 14 yards. The final pass put the ball on the 13 line as the half ended.

Coach Ray Flaherty started his aces, Battles and Baugh, together in the last half and the third quarter brought 14 points. In the first series after the kick-off Wayne Millner grabbed a Cincinnati fumble and skirted 12 yards for touchdown, and Riley Smith place-kicked the extra point.

Washington held after the kick-off and marched from midfield to a touchdown. Battles and Baugh picked up 15 yards together and then Slingin' Sam fired an 11-yard pass to Riley Smith to the 32. Two plays later Baugh passed to Charlie Malone for 24 yards to the 8. Battles rushed through on the second play from the 6-stripe and Riley Smith again kicked the point for a 14-7 lead.

The Redskins then marched from the Model 48 to the 31 and tried a field goald, but R. Smith's kick went wide. A smashing, weaving 23 yard run by Battles put the ball in position.

The final Washington score came in the final quarter after Dixie Howell had returned a punt 31 yards to the Redskin 46. Howell got 5 and Don Irwin smashed 12 yards. Two plays later Howell passed to Bob McChesney for a first down on the 26. Howell got 6 and then passed to McChesney again who was forced out on the 3-yard line. Irwin smashed over in two plays and Nelson Peterson, a West Virginia boy, place-kicked the point.

Ace Parker and Sam Gardner, last year's famous Duke combination, played with the Cincinnati team as a special feature, but even they couldn't dent the Redskin line. First downs favored Washington 18-2. Washington gained 195 yards from rushing to 42 for Cincinnati and completed 10 of 20 passes for 151 yards, while the Models got 22 yards out of two passes.

Baugh threw 11 passes and connected with seven for gains of 116 yards. Battles carried the ball from scrimmage 12 times and gained 90 yards whil Baugh picked up 51 yards in seven tries.

Indian, Swede Rasslers 'Truck' To Draw in Arena Mat Feature

by Bob Garrison.

Cliff Olsen, the man of a thousand fouls, used every one in his book last night in wrestling Chief Thunderbird to a 60-minute draw in the feature event at Turner's Arena. And 1,500 spectators can testify that he's just about the meanest man this side of bogey-land.

In a bout in which no holds save the strangle were barred, Olsen, the Minnesota Swede, gouged, socked and tortured his Indian foe for one hour, but to no avail. Thunderbird, though he sustained a dislocated ankle midway in the scrap, got in some good blows himself in the roughest battle of the year.

So did his stooge, Little Eagle, several ring-side spectators and Referee Benny Borinick. The first 30 minutes were killed inside and outside of the ring, mostly outside. Olsen, irate by the taunting strains of Little Eagle's tom-tom, alternately aimed his attack first on the musical, then the fighting member of the Redskin team.

After his second assault of the diminutive brave, two police sergeants were summoned for protection. Nothing, however, could protect Thunderbird. A concealed utensil, hidden in his trunks, aided Olsen early in drawing blood from Thunderbird's twisted snoozle and that's when the trouble started.

The sight of crimson reacted on the Indian as it does a Yale man and he was into his war dance, trucking to the rhythm of his cohort's tom-tom. He managed to get in a few healthy blows and harmful grips, but once more Olsen's villianous ethics and a towel tied him up.

Picking up Borinick's, he draped it about Thunderbird's thick neck and proceeded to apply a tourniquet that all but took the last breath from the Redman's lungs. One final retaliation proved fruitless, and when the Chief was unable to do his primitive Big Apple as a result of his leg injury, the match ended with Olsen vainly trying to pin Thunderbird's weary shoulders.

Two Duseks, Rudy and Wally, split even in two bouts. Rudy pinned Nick Campofreds, former Western Maryland University grid star, in 19 minutes with a headlock and leg figure-four. Wally, his younger cousin, took a 12-minute licking from Hans Steinke, the German strong man, a victim of a double leg-lock.

In other preliminaries, Mayes McLain, former Haskell Indian football player, and Wee Willie Davis fought to a dead-end in a 30-minute match; Jack Hader threw Bob Robers in 13 minutes, with a headlock.

15,000 See Boston Bow To Villanova

By the Associated Press.

Wysocki provided the Pennsylvania felines with both of their touchdowns. He made the first one in the second period, when he blocked and recovered one of Solly Nechtem's punts and scampered 35 yards before crossing the B. U. goal line. Early in the third period, he slipped inside the Terrier's safety and gained their end zone in time to catch a 35-yard pass from Ray Stoviak.

The highly touted visiting team, one of the Nation's best, was expected to romp almost at will against its minor college opposition. But it was held on even terms most of the way, and was out-fought during the early stages, despite the fact that the Terriers never had a scoring chance.

The Wildcats made eight first downs to six, and out-rushed the Bostonians 173 yards to 151. The 78 yards that came from overhead were a part of the advance made during the second scoring drive. The victors completed only four of 12 passes, and had three intercepted just when they would have counted most.

The Wildcats started a drive from B. U.'s 35, and were trying to pass from the 25, when Lou Blaszynski intercepted and gave Nechtem a chance to punt out of danger from his 15. He kicked out to his 40, but was given another chance when Villanova was penalized for unnecessary roughness. When he tried again from the 30, John Mellus and Wysocki swarmed into Block.

Society Beauty Pilots Montaya Home at Pimlico

Maude Stevenson, Philadelphia, was second on Trojan Racket. Third was By the Sword, ridden by Judy Johnson, New York, one of America's three licensed women trainers.

Miss West got a cup, Miss Stevenson a compact and Miss Johnson a pin.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Nov. 11.—Breaking the track record by a second and two-fifths, Esposa, a Virginia-bred horse, running in the purple and red of William Zeigler, jr., hung a nose defeat on the great Seabiscuit, C. S. Howard's handicap champion, before 20,000 turf fans today. It was Armistice Day and Ladies' Day for Esposa, which was one of the two mares in the field of eight competing at a mile and five-eighths in the $10,000 added Bowie Handicap.

Making full use of the 15-pound shift in her favor and refusing to yield to the stretch power of Seabiscuit, the daughter of Espino, stuck to her running guns under the direction of Jockey Nick Wall to gain a photograph decision. However, Esposa's victory seemed assured even when the judges called on the camera. Jockey Red Pollard admitted defeat, having to be coaxed to remain in the winner's circle while the picture was being examined.

It was defeat, but far from disgrace for the son of Hard Tack in his final race of the year. He carried 130 pounds over the long route and had none the best of the racing luck, lugging into Caballero II entering the stretch and closing with his usual rare courage. Seabiscuit finished his 1937 campaign with 12 victories, two seconds and a third in 15 races and added $1,500 today to bring his earning for the year to $168,642, the best shown by any horse.

Esposa was a $31.70 shot and has trailed Seabiscuit several times this year at shorter distances. The Bowie was her eighth victory in 20 starts this year, and she won $9,375 today for a season's total of $48,880.

The mare won the twenty-fourth running of the stake in the good time of 2:45 1-5. Zeus set the old mark of 2:46 3-5 in 1911.

Fireworks Starts.

The race was unique in that six of the eight horses were prominent at some stage. Regal Lily, teamed with Firethorn, was first away in the good start. Caballero II followed her as the field passed the stand for the first time, with Seabiscuit third and Esposa fourth.

Entering the back stretch, Pollard allowed Seabiscuit to move up along with Burning Star, but took him back again. Regal Lily and Caballero II then continued their private battle out in front while the horses were under the grip of their pilots.

Nearing the stretch, the fireworks began. Regal Lily and Caballero II began to wilt as their rivals charged up. For a moment it appeared that Seabiscuit might be blocked, but Pollard swung him out into the clear. Going to the whip, Pollard worked Seabiscuit into the lead, but along the rail, saving ground, came Esposa.

The pair hooked up in a stride battle after the sixteenth pole, but it was Seabiscuit which showed the wear and tear of the long battle, and he slid back just enough to assure Esposa the verdict. Burning Star had been up and back several times during the racing, and, unluckily, was blocked while crying to run on entering the stretch. The colt gained some ground when free, but the race was history.

Rideaway Scores.

Rideaway, owned by Gwladys Whitney, won the day's steeplechase event in the flat run from the last fence to the wire, defeating Raymond Guest's Swimalong by a half length after the latter had set the pace over every fence. Wambaw, the favorite, competing in the interests of Tommy Hitchcock, was third. The winner was overlooked in the betting and paid a $23.50 mutuel.

A. J. Joyner's Short Distance went a long distance in the second race and brought Jockey Wayne Wright his first winner of the program. Coming between horses at the stretch turn, Short Distance opened a wide gap approaching the wire. Sir Golden was second and Could Be was third. Versailles, a long shot owned by C. B. Asher, Washington golfer, tossed Jockey P. McDermott and circled the track twice before being caught. Short Distance paid $5.90.

In view of the fact that California has shared the spotlight with Pittsburgh, Alabama and Fordham and has been chosen by popular opinion as the ranking team in the United States, the Difference-by-Score System has absorbed much pro and con comment upon its very low placement of the Californians. California has never figured above eighteenth place. Saturday's tie with the closely rated Washington University eleven not only verified the unbiased Difference-by-Score ratings but also indicates clearly that football elevens invariably will play about average power football even though they reach peak performances upon some occasions.

Cornell, Baylor, Vanderbilt, Nebraska and now California were teams highly favored because of sensational victories. Each of these teams has figured in battles hailed as major upsets in the football battlefront. In each case, the Difference-by-Score ratings have shown these elevens to be lower than tops in playing power.

Pittsburgh scored over Notre Dame by 21-6, or 15 points, to score a bull's-eye for the Difference-by-Score System, as the pregmae difference between the teams was 99.9 less 84.7, or 15.2 points.

Other victories predicted were Navy over Columbia, N. Y. U. over Lehigh, Holy Cross over Colgate, Yale over Brown, Fordham over Purdue, Dartmouth over Princeton, Penn State over Penn, Villanova over Marquette, Minnesota over Iowa, Michigan over Chicago, L. S. U. over Mississippi State. Alabama over Tulane, Georgia Tech over Clemson, Colorado over Utah, Oregon over Washington State, Tulsa over Drake, etc. Among the close battles forecast were Army and Harvard, Texas and Baylor, Rice and Arkansas, Stanford and Southern California, Temple and Michigan State. Major upsets were Carnegie Tech over Duquesne, Auburn over Tennessee, Indiana over Ohio State, Illinois over Northwestern and Manhattan over Detroit.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIDEAWAY, $23.50, $6.70, $3.20; SWIMALONG, $5.00, $2.90; WAMBAW, $2.60.

RIDEAWAY, steadied close to SWIMALONG'S pace from start, came through on inside when placed to drive and wore down pacemaker on final flat. SWIMALONG set pace and fenced well, but could not resist winner. WAMBAW, under tight grip for mile and half, closed gamely. YORK MILLER was held safe. BLACKCOCK lugged in repeatedly. STEEL DUST fell at sixth fence.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Dulaney Valley. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 1:53½. Off 1:56½. Winner, A. J. Joyner's b. f. (2), by St. James—Nearby. Trained by W. F. Mulholland. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHORT DISTANCE, $5.90, $3.70, $2.90; SIR GOLDEN, $8.30, $6.50; COULD BE, $6.20.

SHORT DISTANCE, rated while close to pace, came between horses when asked and opened a good lead in final eighth. SIR GOLDEN raced wide throughout and closed gamely, but was no match for winner. COULD BE was in close quarters along rail in final stages. VERSAILLES unseated rider going to post and ran away 2 miles.

DAILY DOUBLE, RIDEAWAY AND SHORT DISTANCE, PAID $58.10.

THIRD RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Equitable. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:21½. Off 2:22½. Winner, B. Warren's ch. s. (5), by Abbots Trace—. Trained by H. G. Galcher. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:34.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISRULE, $8.60, $5.00, $3.80; ARMY AND NAVY, $9.30, $6.60; ADVANCING, $6.40.

MISRULE, taken back off pace after settling to front, regained command when placed to drive and drew away gradually in quarters. ARMY AND NAVY, allowed to run on own courage for mile, was forced to outside for racing room and closed with rush. ADVANCING bettered position in late stages and closed gamely.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Cecil. For 2-year-old fillies. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:53. Off 2:58. Winner, A. J. Joyner's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COURT DANCE, $4.70, $3.30, $2.40; POLYATA, $15.80, $5.40; AIREGLA, $2.70.

COURT DANCE, steadied along within striking distance of leaders, rallied to drive in final eighth and was opening a gap at end. POLYATA came through between horses to better position entering stretch, but hung in closing stages. AIREGLA was rushed while running with SEMI LUNA and stopped. BORN WISE closed gamely.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,500. The Lord Baltimore Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:22½. Off 3:24. Winner, Herman Philips' b. f. (4), by Axenstein—Fair Hour. Trained by J. Byer. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:43 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR STEIN, $5.80, $3.30, $2.80; BOW AND ARROW, $3.90, $3.40; SIR JIM JAMES, $5.40.

FAIR STEIN, lacking early speed, saved ground, swung out when placed to drive and closed with a rush to be going away. BOW AND ARROW saved ground in early stages, disposed of BISCAYNE BLUE, but could not resist the winner. SIR JIM JAMES, rated for half, hung in final stages. CONQUER went evenly, but failed to threaten seriously.

SIXTH RACE—One and five-eighths miles. Purse, $10,000 added. The Bowie Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:53½. Off 3:58½. Winner, William Zeigler, jr.'s, ch. m. (5), by Espino—Quick Batter. Trained by M. Brady. Net value to winner, $9,378; second, $1,500; third, $1,000; fourth, $350. Time, 2:45 1-5. (New track record.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ESPOSA, $31.70, $9.80, $4.30; SEABISCUIT, $3.70, $2.60; BURNING STAR, $2.70.

ESPOSA, forwardly placed from beginning, was taken back off pace, came through on inside entering stretch and under good handling lasted. SEABISCUIT, always close, was taken back several times, lugged in on CABALLERO II entering stretch and closed gamely when clear. BURNING STAR went forward for a half, was steadied back and could not find racing room entering stretch. FIRETHORN raced on outside throughout. REGAL LILY got good break, but stopped. CABALLERO II quit in stretch test. RED RAIN and CHALLEPHEN were held safe throughout.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Conquest. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:23½. Off 4:25. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's blk. c. (3), by Whiskalong—Artifice. Trained by W. Booth. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:44 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MUSCATINE, $11.20, $4.60, $3.50; STOCKS, $3.30, $2.50; FLYING BREEZE, $4.80.

MUSCATINE, allowed to race on own courage for half, moved up when placed to drive and held STOCKS safe. The latter, under restraint during early running, was hard ridden through stretch, but tired. FLYING BREEZE followed the pace of WISE DART, but faltered in final drive.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Boykin. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:06. Off 5:08. Winner, Mrs. J. B. Bond's ch. f. (3), by Infinite—Lillias. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:48.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INACTIVE, $7.50, $4.30, $3.40; TIME TO GO, $5.40, $4.70; BOOSEL, $6.90.

INACTIVE, away in front, was steadied along when TIME TO GO was sent to front, rallied to driving tactics to regain command and held on with good courage. TIME TO GO moved into contention with rush approaching far turn and fought it out willingly. BOOSEL swerved out while moving up menacingly in stretch.

High Fleet Goes Into Retirement

Baltimore, Nov. 11 (AP).—High Fleet, victor in 9 of 14 starts this year, went into retirement today.

The 4-year-old filly, owned by George E. Widener and racing under lease to his trainer, A. J. Joyner, completed her career with a neck victory in the Ritchie Handicap, at Pimlico yesterday. She earned $4,820 to bring her lifetime purses to $49,345.

She ran out of the money only once in 30 starts of three years of racing, taking 15 firsts, 9 seconds and 5 thirds.

Favorite Pays Off At Rockingham

Salem, N. H., Nov. 11 (AP).—Miss A. Doris' Lady Highgloss, a heavy favorite with New England racing fans, today annexed the major portion of the $1,500 purse in the Armistice Day Handicap, a sprint of 5½ furlongs, before 30,000 persons at Rockingham Park.

Lady Highgloss showed her best late speed to win by a length over Mrs. Louise Palladino's Bubblesome. The latter went into contention with a rush halfway down the back stretch to gain the place, a neck in front of Bachelor Dinner.

Mrs. C. C. Winters' Sanctity, carrying top weight of 120 pounds, finished fourth, failing to land in the money for the second time in 12 starts this year. The winner was the choice of the form players, and paid $5.60, $3.20 and $2.60 in the mutuels. Bubblesome was good for $5.80 and $3.80, while Bachelor Dinner returned $3.

Dear Al: Selections at Bowie.

Betty West won the lady rider's championship of Pimlico when she guided Montoya home in front of five other horses this morning. Miss West broke her mount in front and sat still for the remainder of the 4½-furlong race. Maude Stevenson was second aboard Trojan Racket and she did a lot of booting to save place money from Judy Johnson, woman trainer, who rode By the Sword. Al Weill Sees Rosey Ring Future.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

—New York, Nov. 11.—Al Weill, busiest matchmaker in boxing history, paints the right picture—without splotching his vest:

Weill who pairs the pugs for both Madison Square Garden and the Hippodrome, believes that America has just entered a new era of "fightin' champeens and right promotion at the top."

He says this era will bring unprecedented prosperity to fight clubs throughout the country. "That combination is what it takes."

• • • •

Chunky Al speaks with authority. For 22 years he haas been in the cauliflower business as manager, matchmaker or promoter. For some time he has been recognized as the "super-stylist" of Punch Promenade because of his close study of boxing styles and his ability to bring together men whose styles would assure a good fight. When Promoter Mike Jacobs hired him for the double-barreled Garden-Hippodrome job, it indicated that Mike, at least, figured Al was the best matchmaker in the game.

• • • •

When Al says we are entering a new era, it must be so. Never have I heard him accused of giving off a bum steer—although there are two other accusations against him. Certain newspaper men charge that Al used to splash eggs, gravy, soup and spaghetti on his vest while dining, and that the fat man never changed his vest. They nicknamed him "Weskit." That isn't true now since Al went on a diet. His vest no longer protrudes, and the food can fall into his lap.

• • • •

The other accusation is made by Al's old-time friends and it concerns his early career as a fancy-Dan's ballroom exhibition dancer. Even then Weill craved action. He specialized in whirlwind pivots and top-speed terpsichore. He performed in public halls like Eblin's Casino, Sultzer's and Frnez' Park. There were many impromptu fist fights in those halls. Al's friends insist that he would drop his partner and let her plump to the floor—every time a fight started—in his haste to get a good view of the frcas. He was impressed with the slugging ability of one of those impromptu brawlers. He became the lad's manager and drifted away from dancing. He's been in the fight game ever since.

• • • •

At 43, Weill looks more like a former fighter than a former dancer, although he never boxed. He's a broad-shouldered, bull-necked, thick-set fellow of medium height with tints of silver in his brown hair.

• • • •

Concerning the new boxing era, Weill said, "We got fightin' champeens in most divisions now, headed by Joe Louis in the heavies. Louis will be just as busy as champ as he was before. He'll fight at least twice this winter. They'll be called "...on-title matches," but if Joe loses, he'll lose the title. There ain't no non-title matches among heavies. Louis is a fighter who has to keep busy—or get out of shape. He'll defend that title plenty— or at least try to. None of that one-fight-a-year business for Joe.

• • • •

• • • •

Weill said the prospects were excellent also in the middleweight, welterweight, lightweight, featherweight and bantam divisions. But the light-heavy and flyweight classes had little to offer. He explained that only a trio of Negroes stood out in the light-heavy division—Champion John Henry Lewis and Challengers Tiger Fox and Al Gainer, who fight in Pittsburgh, November 22. Other light-heavies are coming along but haven't reached contender status, excepting Jock McAvoy in England, whom Lewis already whipped.

Festivities Mark Big Game Here Saturday; Rally Is Planned.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With their customary two turns around the field, punting, passing and pushing, George Washington and North Dakota State this afternoon will put the finishing touches to a week of work in preparation for their game tomorrow at Griffith Stadium.

It will be a gala occasion for the Colonials—they hope, for the battle features a pretentious program arranged in honor of the old grads. A series of impromptu rallies around the campus today will culminate in a giant pep rally at the Capital Theater tonight at 11 o'clock, at which Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president, will be the principal speaker. Jim Pixlee, George Washington coach, and C. C. Finnegan, North Dakota State coach, also will speak.

'Sweetheart' Crowned.

But the most important item on the program, from the students' viewpoint, perhaps, will be the crowning of the university's sweetheart. This honor will go to the girl selected from a corps of beauties after several weeks of due deliberation.

Meanwhile, Pixlee and his assistants suddenly have awakened to the realization that in preparing their men for State's running attack they may have overlooked a very important gentleman by the name of Carl Porvig. A halfback, Porvig is said to be a better runner than Ernie Wheeler, accredited star of the team.

Another peculiar angle to State's attack is the fact that Charley Pollock, right tackle, calls the signals. Pollock and Cecil Shrank are the only members of the squad tipping the Fairbanks at 200 pounds.

Georgetown Is Off.

Georgetown entrains for New York this morning, with gay hearts, more confidence than the Hoyas have had in the last few weeks, determined to bring home their first major victory of the season. Jack Hagerty's boys have shown vast improvement with each of their last three games, and figure to stop the Violet after a stiff argument.

Twenty eight men will make the trip, two, Bill Dooley, fullback; and Jim Hill, a tackle, will remain at home because of injuries. Hagerty is anxious to have them at their best for the Maryland game next week.

Hagerty will rely on the same starting line-up that fought West Virginia to a standstill here last week and was rewarded with a 6-6 tie. Capt. Larry Hardy will be back at center, flanked by Lew Shuker and Johnny Frank, guards; Joe Frank and Clem Stralka, tackles; Johnny Cavadine and Al Snyder, ends. The backfield will have Tom Keating, quarter; Joe Mellendick and Charley Wychunas, halves, and "Bull" Darmohray, fullback.

15 Bouts Open Colored Meet

67 Amateurs Compete in First Tourney.

Sixty-seven enthusiastic battlers yesterday were approved for Washington's first annual colored Golden Gloves boxing tournament at Turner's Arena tonight, 8:15 o'clock. Fifteen bouts are on tap.

Outstanding in the field is Billy Banks, walloping 118-pounder, who achieved the semifinals in the All-Americas a year ago. Little less noteworthy is Jimmy Dean, 126 pounds, who won a bout in the All-Americas of a year ago and later scored a knockout in an amateur show at Rockland Palace, New York.

A large crowd is expected for the first colored competition of this kind in Washington's history.

Terps Leave For Nittany

Wolfe to Captain Team Against Lions.

Maryland's football squad, apparently refreshed by its light work this week, will leave by bus for Penn State this afternoon to battle the Nittany Lions tomorrow.

The Terps, who idled Monday and Tuesday and took hour and a half drills Wednesday and yesterday in offensive tactics, will have a brief session on defense before leaving about 4:30 this afternoon. The players will stop at Gettysburg for dinner and will spend the night at Lewiston.

Every member of the squad was in trim for action, except John McCarthy, tall end, and he may be able to play if needed. All of the 29 players will be taken along.

This is the same line-up that began against V. M. I. last week, with the exception that Skotnicki replaces Hewitt. They have been alternating in starting.

Bryan, end; Forrester, center; Mondorff, Hewitt and Boyds, backs, all worked with the first team in the practice drills this week.

awful time of it with the flu; somehow, Harris broke away from the doctors and nurses, grabbed a football uniform, and sneaked into that starting Notre Dame line-up just in time to fall on an Army fumble that paved the way for one of the Irishers' three touchdowns.

And those other "cripples" on that Notre Dame team—Host and Kosky, the ends, and Kurth, the tackle; they somehow dragged themselves through the sixty minutes of football. Of course, they weren't quite themselves—they permitted Army to penetrate within the Notre Dame 40-yard line once during the proceedings.

Small wonder, then, that West Point is wary of the lame and the halt in the Notre Dame line-up. As the game approaches, Army is probably working on the theory that if the Notre Damers fool 'em once, the Notre Damers are smart fellers, but that if the Notre Damers fool 'em twice, then the Army folks are darn fools.

Those incurable folks who still insist on using comparative scores for their football estimates will, of course, await the result of the Army-Notre Dame game tomorrow before judging the Army-Navy prospects at the end of the month.

The game in New York tomorrow may or may not provide a direct line on the comparative ability of the Army and Navy teams. Notre Dame was hard pressed to lick Navy, 9-7, and if the Irish are able to rout Army convincingly the Army-Navy odds will certainly shift in Navy's favor.

But, as I was saying, those comparative scores are about as dependable a basis for judgment as a parasol in a Caribbean hurricane. Back in '32 Notre Dame licked Navy, 12-0, a week before it licked Army, 21-0. The following Saturday, at Franklin Field, Navy took a 20-0 shellacking from Army. It all adds up to the insane asylum.

Larry Kelley Gives Eli Edge Over Tiger

By Larry Kelley.

Good teams may come and good teams may go, but the upsets go on forever.

That should be the theme of this goofiest of football seasons.

Last week brought strange happenings. California, leader in the national poll for the best team in the country, was held to a scoreless tie by a lightly regarded Washington outfit. Alabama, Southern leader, kicked a last-minute field goal to nose out Tulane's Green Wave, which hadn't been more than a ripple all year. Baylor, king of the Southwest, took it on the chin from downtrodden Texas.

What's in store for this week? No one can tell. But we can all guess—it's lots of fun and you get so many insulting letters when you're wrong!

Let's start with one that never comes out the way it looks on paper, Yale-Princeton. In the last three years a heavily favored Tiger team has dropped two decisions to the Elis, most memorable being that madhouse 26-23 last year.

• • • •

For the first time in five years Yale is the favorite—all of which proves nothing. The last time the Blue was favored it was lucky to gain a 7-7 tie when McPartland, Princeton back, turned away from the Yale goal line twice to prove, I guess, that Roy Reigels was not alone in this specialty.

This year, however, Yale boasts Clint Frank, as fine a back as ever pulled on a jersey while the Tigers have a great ball carrier in Jack White. Both teams whisper softly about lines which have been and can be penetrated, with the Elis given a shade here. Neither line could hold a candle to that Fordham unit, but who said anything about Fordham being in the Yale Bowl this week?

• • • •

• • • •

Dartmouth-Cornell? Let's see. Cornell was highly regarded when the season opened and has played some nice games. But there are angles. Syracuse upset them, Yale beat them and then Dartmouth tied Yale. But hold on a minute. Cornell missed Peck, their best ball carrier, in the Yale game, and the Big Red has a fighting line to match the Dartmouth forward wall. Balance that with Hutchinson, MacLeod, Hollingsworth, and what do you get? Not magnolia, it's still Dartmouth.

Turning to New York's big game of the year, we set our sights on Army-Notre Dame. Here's one that never runs true to form.

• • • •

Army has lost one game while the Irish have twice been on the short end of the score, not to mention a scoreless tie with Illinois. Notre Dame has played Pitt, Minnesota, Navy, Carnegie Tech and Illinois. Army came, saw and did pretty well against Columbia, Yale and Harvard. The South Benders have had the tougher assignment and it must have taken plenty out of them. Still, they're a great lot and we'll string along with them. Come on you Irish; McCarthy, McCormick, Sweeney, and, for old-time sake, Puplis!

• • • •

How about a trip South, just to see what's going on and to take a look at Alabama, one of our list of champions. And in the other corner, Georgia Tech!

Tech looks the weaker of the two. The Ramblin' Wreck lost to Duke by a point and to Auburn by three touchdowns. It looks like—wait another minute—those Georgia boys spoiled Vanderbilt's clean record. Can they turn the trick again? It may be so but I say no. I'll take 'Bama!

• • • •

Just to make this travelogue more complete, travel is so broadening, let's sneak out to the West Coast where surprising things happened last Saturday. The Golden Bears, snarling over being held to a tie by Washington, seem to pack too much of everything for thrice beaten Oregon. I like California by a big score.

• • • •

And back again on our swing around the country, stopping this time in Pittsburgh, where a great Pitt team doesn't need the fog of its hometown chimneys to wreak its havoc.

• • • •

Nebraska vs. Pii. in a sold-out stadium. Some 70,000 will pack the park to see the Panthers repeat last year's victory. Nebraska has no Sam Francis or Lloyd Cardwell this year, but even without that great pair, she managed to eke out an early season win over "Winning Football" Bierman's Minnesotans.

McDonald Sets Record.

Al McDonald, anchor man for Lansburgh's bowling team, rolled a new season record in the Departmental Store League last night at Recreation Alleys, when he rolled a sparkling 402 set.

Cards Await Miami Game

District Team Favorite; Hurricane in Shape.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 11.—"Dutch" Bergman and his Flying Cardinals returned tonight to the scene of one of their greatest triumphs, a sensational 20-19 victory over Mississippi in the 1936 Orange Bowl classic. Tomorrow the visitors meet Miami University's potent eleven in a colorful intersectional fray.

Although most of the Catholic University boys who participated in that thrilling game are gone, a few are back, playing their final season for the Cardinal and Black. They will perform in the city's new $300,000 stadium, which is the Orange Bowl game's permanent home.

Underdogs against Mississippi, the Cardinals enter tomorrow night's fray a highly regarded choice over the local eleven by virtue of their convincing 21-0 defeat of West Virginia Wesleyan. They worked out briefly under the lights tonight between halves of a high school game, and did nothing to disturb the odds.

The game will be a battle between football's two major systems, the Notre Dame style, promulgated by Bergman, and the Warner methods taught by Jack Harding and his assistant, Hart Morris. Harding and his helper learned their football from the Pittsburgh master, Jock Sutherland.

The Metallic Nose Knows!

Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten different brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was at least 25% easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

New scientific discoveries have shown that White Owl's Vintage tobacco is exceptionally low in the substances that cause unpleasant tobacco breath. Tests with a delicate osmoscope prove that this tobacco leaves less odor.

White Owl is a better cigar because it always has a Vintage-tobacco filler. Nature—not factory processing—made this tobacco exceptionally mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast crop-inspection system—the only known organization of its kind—to locate Vintage tobacco. Even in Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—and buy only tobacco of the quality of the top three for use in White Owls.

Post Notes on HUNTING

By Bill Ackerman.

With the opening of the hunting season in Virginia and Maryland on Monday, our local season will really be under way, but for the past 10 days those nimrods who couldn't stand the strain of the waiting have been making forays on the nearby States.

ACKERMAN.

More Washingtonians, than ever before, invaded the fastness of the Maine woods in search of bear and deer last month, along with great numbers of hunters from other States. So great were these numbers of out-of-Staters, according to George Stobie, game commissioner, that it required the reordering of licenses, not once, but twice, for a total that was 50 per cent in excess of any previous year.

With the opening, Commissioner Stobie estimated that this year would see the bag of legal deer reach the staggering total of 25,000, a fifth more than the average for the two preceding years. There is little doubt that it will, for, they are so generously distributed over the State that many of them are being shot close to the small settlements and there is no real necessity to journey far north into the "backwoods."

Jersey's season on upland game opened Wednesday with every promise of exceptional hunting for quail, rabbits, pheasants and squirrels. Daily bag limits are ten quail, 6 rabbits, 6 gray squirrels, 3 grouse and 2 (male only) pheasants, with a season limit of 30.

Reports from game wardens indicate that the fine weather conditions that prevailed during the breeding season, plus the co-operative efforts of the farmers and sportsmen in stocking and protection, have done wonders in furthering the restocking plans of the State.

Initial reports from West Virginia in regards to the later opening date on squirrels seems to bear out the contention that we have been shooting them too early, and if we want a continuoance of the sport it will be necessary radically to change the season.

Many West Virginia hunters went forth in a "show me" attitude which meant that the commission's efforts to conserve the supply must be justified in big doses of "proof."

* * * *

Reports of game protectors patrolling their sectors seem to supply it beyond any reasonable doubt. The first 421 hunters checked, reported 1,170 seen, 615 killed for an average time of 2½ hours in the woods. Another 50 checked reported 25 saw no squirrels at all, while the balance had from 1 to the limit of 4. One hunter in Marion County reported that he saw 20, but killed only 2.

Twenty-two hunters reported a kill of 62 squirrels, 42 of which were females, and five of them suckling young. Another had three unborn. Almost half of the squirrels shot were only about half grown.

Generally these findings were duplicated in other counties; very convincing evidence that there was some profit from the later season, but several, like Marion County, reported that although many of the kill was of near-dry matrons that had recently weaned their young, the hunting was better than they had enjoyed at any time during the past five years, but with a supply inadequate to stand the hunting it will be subjected to until the end of the open season and leave enough brood stock for seed. The woods in this section has been so full of hunters that the squirrels are being killed, literally by the hundreds. They are well pleased with the supply and wear an expression that plainly says "I told you so," but withal are learning the value and "why" of the later season. It is to be hoped that they can be made to see the great gain that would accrue with a still later one.

* * * *

Every thoughtful hunter—whether he is conservation-minded or whether he is only interested in getting his share now—must ponder over this fact—the great proportion of young squirrels bagged so far, which would signify that with an early season, opening in September, these young squirrels would be in the nests, and should their mother be killed they would have died of starvation. This is true, not only of the present, but of years past.

From this great number of young squirrels, born only this past summer, but surviving to scamper around the trees under their own power, West Virginia sees a possibility of restoring the supply to the level of five years ago, but only if helped by the hunter.

In two days, West Virginians killed 21 black bears in the counties of Randolph, Hardy, Grant and Tucker. The real bear county of Pocahontas has not been heard from officially, but it is reported that one party killed four.

The supply of ruffed grouse is bearing out pre-season predictions, although in some sections hunters report difficulty in finding them.

Mt. Pleasant High Alters Its Line-up

By Jack Munhall.

With the interhigh football title virtually clinched by Eastern, the meeting of Central and Wilson at 3:15 this afternoon at Central Stadium has little significance. No matter which eleven wins the standings will remain the same. Central holds third place with one victory, one tie and one loss and Wilson rests in the cellar with three setbacks and one tie.

However, the contest will afford Wilson another opportunity to register its first interhigh triumph. The Presidents, making their debut in the series this year, have done unusually well, although their chief claim to success seems to be a 6-6 deadlock with Western. Wilson has impressed countless followers with its fine spirit in the face of uneven odds and never in any game did the boys falter for a moment. They played their best at all times and Coach Carl Heintell has every reason to feel proud of his charges.

Central Alters Line-up.

Central will present a somewhat altered starting line-up. Jim Clark, a transfer from a California school, is eligible for the first time and will play right end. Clark is said to be a talented wingman and is expected to aid the Mount Pleasanters. Ralph Pickett, a reserve halfback who has seen considerable action, will start his first series game, supplanting Bill Ickes. Ickes has a bad leg.

Fans today will see several players who are strong candidates for All-High honors. Wilson will offer Johnny Stevens, its stellar end; Andy McBride, kicking center; Mesrobian, a tackle who also kicks, and Bill Leach, diminutive fullback. Central has Paul Kurtz, a wingman; Charley Jones, great defensive center; Tackle Kenny Herbert and Lou Chacos, a halfback.

Several other attractive scholastic games are carded today. Anacostia High's surprising Indians will risk their clean slate against Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park. This battle should be the toughest of the season for Anacostia, which is being represented by its first football team in history.

Western High travels to Ballston, Va., to face seldom-beaten but often-tied Washington-Lee; Friends School will entertain Baltimore Friends School at Thirty-ninth street and Wisconsin avenue; Landon Prep and St. Alban's, a pair of traditional rivals, will hold annual struggle on the St. Alban field.

Over in Alexandria, Hopewell High invades the lair of powerful George Washington High in Virginia State championship clash.

Two Games Set For Softballers

Hoping to start a new winning streak, the Community All-Stars, with blood in their eyes, clash with Bureau of Standards tomorrow night in the feature of the Community Center Indoor Softball League in Tech High gym.

Battling in the opener of the twin bill will be two last-pleace teams, Treasury and Y. M. C. A. Although the latter forfeited to Victory Post Tuesday it promises to place a team on the floor from now on. Treasury has taken its share of knocks and bruises, but still has great spirit and is beginning to show a little strength.

'Hoodoo' Corner Beat Dempsey and Sullivan

Editor's note—Following is the fifth of a series on the life of the late Jack McAuliffe, retired undefeated lightweight champion of the world.

By Harry Ferguson.
United Press Staff Writer.

New York, Nov. 11.—There used to be a ring in New Orleans and Jack McAuliffe always called one side of it "hoodoo corner" for it was there that he sat and watched his two best friends—John L. Sullivan and Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil—take the worst beatings of their lives. He was chief second for both of them.

McAuliffe bet $6,000 that Sullivan would whip "the dude with the pompadour"—Jim Corbett—and almost everybody else thought nobody could stand up against the Boston strong boy. Everybody, that is, except William A. Brady, Corbett's manager, who sat at the ringside chewing on a palm leaf fan.

"Sullivan rushed out of his corner at the start of the fight," McAuliffe said, "trying to put across a quick knockout. He thought Corbett would stand toe to toe and slug it out with him. Sullivan seemed to be utterly lost when Corbett circled him and feinted him out of position. After the third round I was fanning Sullivan and the towel struck him on the legs. He looked down at them and then up at me. 'Gone, Jack,' he said. 'Both legs are gone.'

"It was perfectly plain to me that Corbett was goin to win. Sullivan was sinking by inches and after the eighteenth round I tried to get him to take a drink of brandy. He didn't want it. In the twenty-first round Corbett quit dancing and suddenly took the offensive. Sullivan went down—not in a heap and all of a sudden but a collapse that meant only one thing. His legs wouldn't support him any longer. He was counted out while he was still trying to get up.

"We dragged him to his corner—'hoodoo corner'—and he got hold of the ropes, pulled himself up and yelled to the crowd:

"'Gentlemen, I went once too often, Thank God, an American won!'

"That night I joined Sullivan in a good old-fashioned drinking bout. At the height of the evening he said to me 'Jack, you can't fight a good fight and take the booze, too. Why don't you quit the stuff and do some training?' I didn't answer. I think Sullivan was the strongest heavyweight we ever had and one of the hardest punchers. But I believe that for only three years of his life was he a really great fighter. He never learned how to box and after a while he began to take on fat where it does the most harm—inside.

"That night in New Orleans McAuliffe didn't realize that a new era had come in the prizefighting business, but he realized it later, and what he said was that Corbett was the man 'who took boxing out of the saloon into the drawing room.'

"It was in the same 'Hoodoo Corner' that McAuliffe watched the original Jack Dempsey take a terrible beating from a freak fighter. McAuliffe had never heard of Bob Fitzsimmons until Dempsey was matched with him for the New Orleans fight.

"The ring was pitched in a sand pit, McAuliffe said, and in addition to the water bottle and towels that seconds always carried I took along a butcher knife to scrape the sand off Dempsey's shoes between rounds. I'll never forget when Fitzsimmons came into the ring and bared a double row of yellow teeth in a wide grin. He had the shoulders of a heavyweight, the waist of a middleweight and the legs of a lightweight. His arms were so long that he could stretch out his fingers and almost touch his knees.

* * * *

"It took Fitzsimmons only about three steps to cross that ring and land on top of Dempsey. Fitz tied Jack up like a baby. At the start of the second round, Fitzsimmons leaped across the ring like an ape and swung his right into Dempsey's face. I saw blood spurt like water coming out of a fire hydrant, and there lay Dempsey down against the ropes with no nose. It had been mashed clear into his face. The referee began to count, but Fitzsimmons moved over like he was going to hit Dempsey while he was still down. At least his right was cocked.

"I grabbed the butcher knife and ducked under the ropes. I put the knife right against Fitzsimmons stomach and if he had come forward three more inches it would have killed him. Fitzsimmons jabbered at me and yelled for the referee to throw me out of the ring. Somebody rang a bell.

"As soon as I got Dempsey back to the corner—'Hoodoo Corner'—I saw that he was out on his feet. He couldn't breathe through his nose. His eyes were glazed. But I shoved him back into the ring and somehow he kept going for a while. In the twelfth round Dempsey spit out a mouthful of blood and took one last shot at Fitzsimmons' jaw. He missed by a yard. At the start of the next round Fitz seemed to know it was all over, for he walked out, measured Jack carefully and let fly with a right. Dempsey went down hard, his shoulder plowing into the sand. I don't think he could have got up, but I didn't wait to see.

Abrams Gets Semifinal Role

George Abrams, the young Jewish middleweight, who is unbeaten in 11 consecutive professional matches since he abandoned the simon-pure ranks some nine months ago, moves up a notch Monday night at Turner's Arena, where he has been booked to meet Vic Finazzo, hard-hitting Baltimorean, in a semi-windup match.

The Abrams-Finazzo match will be in support of the ten-rounder between Larrupin' Lou Gevinson, the Southwest southpaw, and Cristobal Jaramillo, Porto Rican title-holder claimant.

Heretofore Abrams has been cast only in a preliminary role, and he has never failed to put up a good scrap. His record includes knock-outs over Johnny Stilson, Sam Bacala, Bob Wilson, Tony Livingston, Charlie Rondo, Eddie Miles, and victories over Joe Chaney, Hunter Crostic, Charley Ubele, Joey Spangler and Charlie Marshall.

Abrams gave Marshall a sound whipping last Monday in a six-rounder. In Finazzo he meets a tough scrapper. The Baltimorean, who hails from a fighting family, is said to have given Ivan Nedomatsky a thrashing last summer in Harrisburg, Pa.

Abrams is managed by Sid Fishel, who has had him since the youngster's days as a Golden Gloves fighter. Abrams celebrated his nineteenth birthday yesterday.

Matchmaker Ahearn, who expects to round out his supporting card today, received word from New York yesterday that Gevinson would probably get a good ranking by the National Boxing Association, if he trims Jaramillo. Lou has already whipped such top-notchers as Johnny Pena, Kid Covelli and Danny London.

Eastern Races Shift To Bowie Oval Today

Maryland's racing scene shifts to Bowie today. The nearby Prince Georges County track will offer the round-and-round sport for the next 16 days and, excepting the December meeting at Charles Town, will mark the curtain call for thoroughbred competition in the East.

Given a break in the weather, Bowie should have one of its most successful meetings. Betting in the State has gained momentum through the fall season and with New England and New York tracks closed, Bowie will draw much of the big money that has gone elsewhere.

The meeting will mark the closing of 150 days of racing in Maryland and more than $135,000 will be distributed to horsemen. The four outstanding stakes are the $2,500 added Prince Georges Autumn Handicap tomorrow, the $5,000 added Endurance Handicap, the $5,000 added Thanksgiving Handicap and the $7,500 added O'Hara and Bryan Memorial Handicap.

While Seabiscuit and others will be en route to California, while still other stars will have been retired for the season, enough of the high-class horses will be in action to assure Bowie representative fields for its staked. Masked General, the 3-year-old which might have defeated War Admiral but for running out at the final turn, will compete, as will Calumet Dick, a winner over Seabiscuit in the Narragansett Special.

The closing of other tracks and the gap between Bowie and the opening of Florida has made the track headquarters for a capacity gathering of horse flesh. It is estimated that 1,800 horses, ready to race, are in the Maryland area now.

Today's program is topped by the Blackistone Handicap, a $1,200 added sprint of 6 furlongs. Ten horses were named overnight and the weights have been distributed in a manner that points to keen competition. Mucho Gusto, owned by the Araho Stable, carries top weight of 121 pounds and breaks from off the rail. The Shandon Farm is represented by Evergold and Mainland, frequent winners this year. Mrs. Kenneth N. Gilpin sends Fast Express and Teddy's Star to the post. The Bomar Stable places its hopes in Grand Slam, reconditioned after a season away from the turf. Carvola carries the colors of E. K. Bryson. Unheralded, Clocks and Sunned complete the field.

With the absence of steeplechasing, only seven-race programs are scheduled. Post time for the first event is 1:30 o'clock, with the daily double on the first and third races.

Business Index Drops to 10% Below Normal

National Activity 1 Per Cent Under October a Year Ago.

New York, Nov. 11.—In over two-thirds of the Nation's market business slowed down appreciably during the month of October, causing the national business index to drop 6 points, according to the monthly survey of business conditions conducted by Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., New York and Detroit advertising concern.

At the end of October, according to the report, the national index stood at 10 per cent below normal. In October, 1936, the national index stood at 9 per cent below normal.

"In the 147 trading areas covered by the research," the report states, "42 areas, among them several important centers, were able to hold their own or gain ground over September.

Some Areas Gain.

"These areas were supported by a continued high rate of activity in their local coal, oil, automobile, tobacco and diversified consumer goods industries. Thirty-five of them show increases and seven stayed as they were. The remaining 105 areas in the country lost ground, as compared with last month."

The greatest October gains, with indices improving 2 per cent or more over September, were registered in the following areas:

650 New Federal Loan Units Facilitate Home Financing

Associations Established Since 1933 Serve Areas Previously Lacking in Thrift or Home Loan Institutions.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Provision of more complete thrift and home financing facilities for a large section of the country through formation and chartering of 650 new Federal savings and loan associations, is reported by J. Arthur Younger, chief of the Savings and Loan Division of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. In a short period, these institutions have accumulated approximately $225,000,000 in assets, he states.

"In 1933, ther were large parts of the country which were either totally without thrift and home-financing institutions, or inadequately served," Mr. Younger said, "explaining this was why Congress authorized the creation of new institutions to operate under a Federal charter and the conversion of existing institutions, which could qualify, from State to Federal charter. As a result, there are only a relatively few localities which do not have contact with these facilities today.

"Aside from the actual establishment of these new institutions," he stated, "it is significant that in the organization of 650 new boards of directors to manage them, many hundreds of community leaders and prominent citizens have become interested and identified actively with the savings and loan business and the opportunities it provides for the upbuilding of American communities in encouraging systematic savings, and in providing, through such savings and the Federal Home Loan Bank System credit, for the construction of needed new homes, and modernization and repair of existing ones.

Federal Charters.

"In addition to these 650 new associations," he reminded, "661 State-chartered associations have converted to Federal charter, making a total of 1,311 of these Federal institutions with assets in excess of $1,000,000,000. These converted associations naturally have a much larger share of the total assets, nearly all of them have been established in business for many years, with fine records of growth and earnings. All of these operate under the same modern methods and practices, under the supervision of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

"Each Federal association," he explained, "is required, by law, to insure the savings of investors up to $5,000 on each account through the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. Loans are made for long terms on the monthly direct-reduction plan, enabling borrowers to pay off their home mortgages like rent. Each Federal association is a locally managed, mutual thrift institution, serving its own particular community in its own way."

Bank Credits.

Fundamental problems involved in the extension of bank credit were presented to the Associated Retail Credit Men at their regular meeting this week by John A. Reilly, president of Second National Bank, and a member of the speakers' unit of the District of Columbia Bankers Association. This was the first of a series of talks being sponsored by the bankers association for the purpose of promoting a better understanding between banks and their customers.

Mr. Reilly discussed the subject both from the standpoint of the theory of credit and the practical application of the science of credit. He said: "Few people understand the fundamentals of credit or the magnitude of its various services. Credit makes possible the enjoyment of the best the earth affords and is plentiful for those who understand the simple laws that govern its acquisition.

"The credit of a nation is just as important as that of a modest wage earner who seeks to purchase one of the necessities of life from you retailers on his promise to pay in the future. The only way this Government may expect to maintain the credit that it once enjoyed is to allow the industrial and financial geniuses to so manage economic units of this country that they will be able to operate profitably—create wealth and pay a fair part of that wealth in the form of taxes.

"Credit is the very life blood of any bank. Without it a bank's usefulness to a community would immediately cease," he said, explaining that a bank is in reality a trustee for its depositors. Because of this position, it has a sacred obligation to so manage its assets that as few losses as possible may be sustained.

Auditor's Meeting.

The auditors' section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association held its regular monthly meeting last night at the Lafayette Hotel. "Individual ledger systems in operation in banks," was the subject for discussion and papers were read on "The Recordak Photostatic Accounting System," by Mrs. Lillian E. Salter, McLachlen Banking Corporation; "Tidal Postings," by Vernon Dorman, American Security & Trust Co., and "Commercial Bank Bookkeeping Unit Posting System," by Millard S. Yeatman, auditor, Hamilton National Bank.

The meeting was presided over by the section's chairman, Harry L. Downey, manager of the accounting department of Washington Loan & Trust Co.

Clearings 5.4% Over Year Ago

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 11.—Bank clearings in 22 leading cities totaled $5,422,722,000 in the six-day week ended November 10, a rise of 5.4 per cent over $5,144,728,000 in the comparable week last year, which was a five-day period, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

In the preceding week bank transactions in the same cities were 0.3 of 1 per cent ahead of the 1936 comparative.

Volume at New York went to $3,388,647,000, an increase of 1.4 per cent over $3,342,270,000 in the 1936 week. The aggregate at outside centers of $2,034,075,000 was a gain of 12.9 per cent over $1,802,058,000 a year ago.

Increases were shown at all cities, the more important being 32.1 per cent at Detroit, 29.6 at Cleveland, 25.9 at Richmond and 20.5 at Philadelphia.

Clearings at Chicago totaled $288,700,000, an increase of 4.4 per cent over $276,600,000 a year ago.

Washington Clearings.

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $24,914,008.55 for the week ended Wednesday, November 10, which compares with $23,677,457.03 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of 5.4 per cent. Compared with a total of $25,839,911.66 for the previous week, clearings decreased $925,903.11.

Tobacco Markets.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 11.—Maryland—Net receipts for the past week declined to 183 hogsheads and sales to 312 hogsheads, as the season nears its close. No change in prices was noted. A few hogsheads of new crop ground leaves have been sold at prices reported between 4.00 and 22.00. They appear to have less color and less body than the 1936 crop.

U. S. Securities Up in London

London, Nov. 11 (AP).—Bullish developments in the United States in the last two days brought another strong buying movement today in the stock market, with American shares generally $1 to $2 or more higher.

Such issues as U. S. Steel, American Telephone & Telegraph, Anaconda Copper, Atchison, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Eastman Kodak were in strong demand throughout the day, following the address last night of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, in which he reaffirmed that the budget would be balanced.

Only Brazilian issues failed to profit from the cheerful sentiment, which generated more force overnight after yesterday's brisk rally in Wall Street. The Vargas Coup d'Etat in Rio de Janeiro, with the announcement that payments would be suspended on foreign obligations, was followed here by suspension of dealings in Brazilian bonds. Brazilian traction shares dropped more than two points.

Chicago Livestock.

Chicago, Nov. 11 (AP).—(United States Department Agriculture.)—Hogs—Receipts, 15,000, including 8,000 direct; strong to 10 higher than Wednesday's average; top, 9.15; bulk good and choice, 150-230 pounds, 8.90@9.10; 240-300 pounds, 8.80@9.00; most good packing sows, 8.15@8.50; lightweights and best medium weights up to 8.60.

CATTLE—Receipts, 5,500; calves, 1,000; steer quality plainest of week running mostly to common and medium grades; these in narrow demand; around steady, but market still under pressure; little here to sell above 12.00; fairly liberal supply beef cows; cutter and common grades about steady, but others slow, weak; low cutters and cutters, 3.75@5.00; only few strong-weights 5.25; fed heifers slow; common grades steady at 7.00 down; sausage bulls and vealers steady; practical top sausage bulls, 7.00; vealers mostly 11.00 down, selects 11.50, very sparingly.

SHEEP—Receipts, 7,000, including 2,300 direct; fat lambs opening slow about steady on few early sales; some bids lower; good to choice natives to packers 9.75@10.00; best held 10.10 and above; sheep about steady; native ewes, 2.50@4.00.

Foreign Markets.

London, Nov. 11.—Stock exchange traders were more cheerful today following Wednesday's rally in Wall street and the brighter international political outlook. Copper and tin shares improved with the sharp rise in base metal prices and rubbers move higher on the improvement in that commodity. Gilt-edged securities and speculative issues were supported. Transatlantic stocks finished higher, but under the high prices of the day.

Paris—Closed.

Liverpool—Cotton futures were quiet and steady, closing 3 points higher to 4 lower. Bombay was a purchaser, but offerings were light. The afternoon session was featureless. Wheat closed firm, ¼d. to 1¼d higher on further reports of frost in Argentina and liberal sales of Russian wheat to the United Kingdom. Liquidation in December took place in late dealings.

Cost of Living Creeps Higher In October

New York, Nov. 11.—The cost of living of wage earners in the United States rose only 0.1 per cent from September to October, according to the monthly survey of the National Industrial Conference Board. A substantial decline in food prices was slightly more than offset by increases in the cost of the other groups that compose the wage earner's budget. The cost of living in October of this year was 4.4 per cent higher than a year ago, 24.8 per cent higher than in the spring of 1933, but 11.6 per cent lower than in October, 1929.

Food prices in October were 1.0 per cent lower than in September, 2.5 per cent higher than October, 1936, 41.9 per cent higher than in the spring of 1933, but 21.1 per cent lower than in October, 1929.

Rents continued to advance, rising 0.7 per cent from September to October. They are now 10.4 per cent higher than a year ago, 42.3 per cent higher than at the low of 1934, and only 3.1 per cent below the level of October, 1929.

Clothing prices increased 0.3 per cent from September to October, bringing them to a level 6.6 per cent higher than in October, 1936, and 29.7 per cent above the low point of 1933. They were, however, still 20.5 per cent lower than in October, 1929.

Coal prices advanced seasonally, 0.7 per cent, from September to October, but they were 0.6 per cent lower than a year ago, and 8.4 per cent lower than in October, 1929.

The index of sundries was 0.8 per cent higher in October than in September. This rise was due primarily to an increase of 6.1 per cent in the index of admission charges to motion picture theaters, information concerning which is collected as of October of each year. The cost of sundries in October was 3.2 per cent higher than a year ago, 8.5 per cent higher than at the low point of 1933, but 2.0 per cent lower than in October, 1929.

The purchasing value of the dollar was 111.7 cents in October, as compared with 111.9 cents in September, 116.7 cents in October, 1936, and 100 cents in 1923.

Electric Output Drops 2.4% in Week

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Production of electricity in the United States for the week ended November 6 dropped 2.4 per cent to 2,202,451,000 kilowatt hours from 2,256,947,000 kilowatt hours in the preceding week, but was 1.2 per cent ahead of 2,175,810,000 kilowatt hours in the comparable 1936 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The more than seasonal decline carried the Associated Press index of power production, with 1929-1930 taken as 100, to 116.8 from 118.4 in the previous week. A year ago the index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 116.9.

Steel Corp. Shipments Lower in October

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Shipments of finished steel products by subsidiary companies of the U. S. Steel Corporation for October were 792,310 tons, a decrease of 255,652 from September, and the highest October, but one, since 1929, the company reported today.

Shipments for the first ten months of 1937 were 11,749,156 tons, or 2,874,032 above those for the comparable 1936 period, an increase of 32 per cent. In October, 1936, shipments were 1,007,417 tons.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended November 6 as approximately 8,600,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1936, 9,647,000 tons; 1935, 8,063,000 tons.

Radio Football Is Novelty at The Claridge

By Chanticleer

The King Cole Room at the Claridge has instituted a new Saturday afternoon brand of entertainment. A radio receiving set is installed in the dining room and after a special Saturday noon buffet the diner can lean back with a pack of cigarettes and a highball and hear a complete football game.

The buffet, incidentally, is under the personal care of Chef Henri Romer. It begins with one of those gorgeous salad selections offered on a portable salad wagon.

Senators and Congressmen returning for the special session are "discovering" the Shoreham's Blue Room, which opened after the regular session had adjourned. They do say that one of the first things a Congressman does on returning to the city is to call for his secretary and have a memo taken for a reservation from Robert. Ramond and Renita, world famous dancers; La Trianita, the Spanish dancer, and Henri Therrien, painter of songs, are the cosmopolitan entertainers on the Shoreham floor this week.

Incident at the Russian Troika: It seems that Igor Sikorsky, the aviation gentleman, stopped at the Troika the other evening and asked the majordomo whether it really was Russian. He was answered it was definitely and positively Russian. A little later Mr. Sikorsky reappeared and was reassured—this time by George, the head waiter. Thereupon Mr. Sikorsky ordered a perfect Russian dinner and was pleased beyond words when he got a genuine Russian meal. The only ironic note was that his waiter, although conversant in the Russian tongue, was a Greek.

Important on-the-ways: The big menagerie night at Boulevard Farms. It's on the way . . . If you think you've attended shindigs in your time you should have been present a night or two ago when Melvin Covington's wedding was fittingly observed at Brinkley's, the Southeast gathering spot. Melvin, be it known, is the hamdsome blond barkeeper at Brinkley's. No blowout is quite like one for a good bartender.

Master-of-ceremonies Bill McIntire has plenty of work at Bamboo Gardens this week. A lovely line of dancing maidens and the comedy team of York and Lewis are standouts . . . Marian Dawn is back at the Lotus after a bit of a vacation. Conflicting rumors have it that Marian was doing the big city—but also that she was merely at Hagerstown.

Police Dedicate Fifth Boys Club In 10th Precinct

Facilities at All Souls' Church Will Handle 500 Children.

With dedication of its fifth club, the Metropolitan Police of the District of Columbia last night extended its recreational and training program for boys to at least 500 more members—bringing its total enrollment to around 8,500.

The new clubrooms and gymnasium were made available by All Souls Unitarian Church, at Fifteenth and Harvard street, and are the first in the Columbia Heights area.

Dr. Percival Hall, chairman of the board of trustees for the church, made the presentation. Acceptance was by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, founder and vice president of the Boys Club of Metropolitan Police, who sketched accomplishments of his group during the four years since its organization.

George A. Ford, president of Columbia Heights Business Men's Association, declared the club would make possible a boys' recreational program in an area "notoriously devoid of play space." He praised the generosity of the church and pledged his association to support the program.

James E. Colliflower, president of the police club organization, presided as Sergt. J. E. Scott, city director of the clubs, presented John J. Kirby, who will be supervisor of the All Souls' unit, and Roy D. Engel, who will be assistant supervisor.

The Rev. G. B. Pierce, pastor, gave the invocation and benediction. Music was furnished by the Boys Club Band, which has become one of the best-known musical groups in the District.

The new unit will be known as Club Ten, due to its location in the Tenth Police Precinct. Beginning Monday, it will be open from 3:30 until 9 p. m. twice weekly. Activities worked out will depend on ages of boys enrolling. An effort will be made to accommodate 500 boys, although it is believed this will not reach all boys of the neighborhood who are eager to participate.

Self-Inflicted Shot Fatal To Yugoslav Official

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Nov. 11 (AP). Gen. Wojislaw Tomic, assistant regent and commandant of Belgrade, died tonight. He had been in a serious condition from a bullet wound which police said yesterday was self-inflicted. The general was an adviser to Prince Paul, a member of the regency council during the minority of King Peter II.

Bob Burns Says—

People who are quiet and meek around an office usually hold their jobs a long time but they don't usually get advanced very fast because the boss is apt to forget that they're around.

My Uncle Paddy was one of them kind of fellas. He had been workin' in an office for years and years without gettin' an advance in salary and one day, he finally mustered up enough courage to go in and ask the boss for a raise. He walked in so quietly the boss didn't hear him and kept on going through some papers on his desk.

Finally Uncle Paddy cleared his throat and the boss looked up with a start and says "Well, what do you want?" Uncle Paddy says, "Sir, I have been here 25 years." The boss looked down at the floor where Uncle Paddy was standin' and says, "So you must be the guy that wore that ugly hole in the carpet!"

Last Rose

The last roses of summer yesterday came to the yard of R. C. King, assistant superintendent, Division of Stamps, Postoffice Department, and instead of hurrying in the photographers (as men are wont to do when roses bloom this time of year), King simply clipped the roses and brought them to his office. There he placed them on the desks of his clerks, Miss Ruby E. Stoner and Mrs. Evelyn Burdette.

Washington's Government workers, whom Leonard D. White so long moved among, still engage his interest—even the Government workers of the year 1817 and prior thereto. A letter indicating this came today. Mr. White, now with the Department of Political Science, University of Chicago, writes us for additional information on the "Provident Association of Clerks," a group mentioned in this column some ten days ago.

This association was of a benevolent character, as its name implies, and seems to have lived, moved and paid its funeral benefits in the years around 1817. The organization came to light in a yellowing booklet unearthed by Grover Ayres, of Washington. The book contained the organics of the Provident firoup and is fairly well preserved.

Ayres believed he had possessed it about five years, but was uncertain where he obtained it. He said the Library of Congress had evinced interest, thinking the book a very rare one. Does anyone know anything about this ancient group? If so, eell us, so that we may inform Mr. White.

Night Opening

For the second time in Bureau of Engraving history Director A. W. Hill will open the huge plant in the evening for inspection by visitors. The favor will be shown next Friday evening in connection with National Philatelic Week. Director Hall and his associates will be on hand to show the stamp enthusiasts how stamps are made.

In any event, this column figured as how it might be saying a kind word for the U. F. W. A. So the other day when an employe of Internal Revenue came in and told about that circular, his conclusion seemed not only searching but sound. The circular said the bureau didn't want union business mixed up with Government business . . . didn't want any collecting of dues at lunch hours, but all the same, it stated, the bureau had no feelings about employes joining unions.

Now, our informant felt that all employe groups excepting the newer U. F. W. A. are well established and the restrictions on dues collections, etc., would injure none other than the U. F. W. A., which obviously would want to campaign while the employes could be easily reached.

But not so, complains the U. F. W. A. They saw the circular as a victory because it let down the bars, gave sanction to union membership. And here is a point hard to understand, because everyone from the President down has said people could join what union they chose.

Notes

President Charles I. Stengle (A. F. G. E.) attended a meeting of Local 87 and was presented a gold life membership card . . . Treasury Local, No. 11, U. F. W. A., met last night and heard Mrs. A. Stein, of the Woman's Trade Union League . . . Miss Mary W. Dewson, newest member of the SSB, last night addressed the U. F. W. A. Local No. 10, at the national headquarters, 532 Seventeenth street, northwest . . . The Government has undertaken the study of breeding and other habits of muskrats, to be undertaken at a new fur-animal field station recently established by the Biological Survey near Cambridge, Md.; Dr. Herbert L. Dozier, newly appointed biologist of the survey, will conduct the research work . . . To FCA have come: Harold D. Walker, Yakima, Wash., who takes a position in the Administrative Division, Personnel Section, Detail Unit; Margaret E. Hawkinson, McPherson, Kans., and Ann Jane King, Savannah, Ga., who have jobs in the Administrative Division, Stenographic Section . . . Note in the FCA Employes Bulletin: "Because of increased running expenses, the price of admission to the women's gym class at Central High School has been raised to 15 cent." Great heavens!

Members of the National Parks Special Police will write as follows to individual Congressmen: "We of the (NPSP), detailed to buildings of the United States Government, are, for the work performed, the lowest paid men in the United States . . . Our duties, supposedly that of safeguarding the property contained in these buildings, includes also the running of elevators at times, closing of windows, acting in the capacity of fireman—even at times to put coal on a fire in some of the smaller buildings . . . Would, may I respectfully ask, a draftsman, secretary, lawyer, be asked to perform these duties? . . . This group does not receive permission to take any of the holidays, works Saturdays and Sundays, although they are allowed seven days off during the month . . . We feel that when we perform our tasks of policing the Government buildings and protecting the properties, we are doing our full duty and we should be compensated adequately . . . All we ask is a living salary . . . $96.50 per month with a family to support is not even a pittance." The communication is signed, "Faithful and stanch to our flag, Joseph Piggott, member, special police, Interior Department."
